"MICHIGAN AND THE OLD NORTHWEST" — Mackinaw — Langlades

CHARLES LANGLADE
Michigan's most noted half-breed was Charles Langlade, his mother an Ottawa.

At an early day his father, Augustin, opened a trading post at Green Bay.

Charles, regarded as "father of Wisconsin", fought in 99 battles and skirmishes.

They included Pickewillany, Braddock's defeat, Quebec, 1780; St. Louis raid; they took in three events which might set the tone for all such future events.

The ladies, winners of a radio contest to honor the women who did their bit during the war years, visited Washington during the week when three top-drawer government officials, all close friends of Harry Truman, were sworn into new jobs.

The swearing-in of a cabinet officer used to be a rather modest affair. The swearing-in, his family a few friends, and his office staff, a few of the press, usually gathered in his new office, and the whole affair was over in about the time it takes for a bride and groom to say, "I do."

True, Fred Vinson and Lewis Schwellenbach did travel to the Capitol for their inaugurations as treasury and labor secretaries respectively. But those events occasioned no such hoopla as did the ceremony which made Mr. McNamara.

day — Tuesday — Wednesday Washington news one late week in June.

Mrs. Magee and Mrs. Baker and five thousand spectators, plus the Navy band, gathered on the White House lawn to watch Mr. Vinson take over his new office as chief justice of the United States; they saw John Snyder's big moment made bigger when President Truman strolled from the White House to the treasury portico to watch his St. Louis cronies take the oath as head of the treasury department; and they observed tall, young-looking John Steelman's swearing-in as reconversion director, ceremony which took place in the rose gardens of the White House.

Having observed these impressive occasions, the Black Hills visitors could appreciate the widely-whispered remark of Undersecretary of the Navy John Sullivan (Sullivan got his swearing-in done quietly and traditionally on June 18.) As Sullivan congratulated John Steelman after the rose garden ceremony, he asked, "Well, are you the last of the June brides?"

SPORT HIGHLIGHTS

(By Bill Conroy)

This week's congratulations go to Harold Westfall of 23705 Grand River, who on Friday of last week landed several bluegill and bass and topped the day off with a 10 pound pike. Westfall said that it took nearly 10 minutes to net this fish which incidentally is the largest catch in his fishing career. He is a good fisherman with plenty of experience and patience and he enjoys the sport.

The Northville Downs Race Track opened their summer season.

son this week with some of the greatest pacers and trotters that harness racing has witnessed, taking part in the night programs. OAKLAND COUNTY RED CROSS NOTES

Nine hundred individuals last week attended the Red Cross Water Safety classes sponsored by the Oakland County Chapter according to Mark Smith, chairman of this service. Classes are meeting weekly during the summer months at 15 beaches and pools of the county. Besides the regular program a number of volunteer Water Safety instructors are teaching special classes. Mrs. Helen Adams is teaching at Middle Straits Lake; Lillian Arvesen is teaching at Green Lake; Mr. Smith and Bradford Kempton are holding classes at Elizabeth Lake.

Mr. Smith states that the number of recent drownings should impress the public that the best insurance against such accidents is knowledge of individual safety in the water. Precautions which each individual should take and which bear repeating are: Never swim or dive into unknown water; never swim when overheated or immediately after eating; never swim alone; never swim to the limit of one's strength; do not dive from a boat in the middle of a lake unless you are an expert and can reach shore if the boat floats away. Many drownings could be avoided if each individual would observe these precautions and similar ones.

Milk Proteins
Milk proteins are particularly valuable because their presence enables the body to use vegetable proteins more efficiently and thus get more value from other foods. Also, the body can use milk calcium more easily than calcium from other foods.

Hatched From Back
The young of the Saratoga water toad are hatched from eggs imbedded in the soft skin of the female's back in such a manner that each egg becomes a separate cell.

Used Pairs
Used furs are employed to make fur stockings, fur electrical appliances and hundreds of other common items.
