THIS WEEK. ... we find the newspapers, of our country observing National Newspaper. Week. "A Free Press." Voice of Freedom — Guardian of Liberty." Stop a moment and read that over again. It's very easy to read that and side by — perhaps because you have become accustomed to this so-called liberty of ours that we no longer seem to feel the need to consider it. — we just take it for granted. This is no place for a long dissertation on the subject, and we don't intend to start any preaching. It is an excellent opportunity, however, for the manopachestreet to pause and consider the value of the newspaper and the importance of the Freedom of the Press to him.

CLARIFICATION seems necessary in regards to the remarks we made last week concerning the Honor Roll which now stands at Farmington Road and trand River. We had no intention of belittling the thought behind the Honor Roll. The American Legion had a splenidd thought when they must up the Honor Roll, and they have received a great deal of credity from everyone for this service to the community? The Honor Roll they from everyone for this service to the community? The Honor Roll they from everyone for this service to the rommunity? The Honor Roll they from the served hove the same at the served last purpose. It is certainly high time our community did something last purposes to the served hove the same and the served how the served in World War II. We understand the Legion proposes to put served in World War II. We understand the Legion proposes to put served in World War II. We understand the Farmington should have a community memorial — we commend any group that will take the initiative in this direction.

It is a pleasure to me again to salute the press of the United States on the occasion of National Kewspaper Week. The newspapers of the Nation did a magnificent job during the war. They threw their full support behind the campaign to salvage and collect needed war materials. They were in the forefront of every drive for the sale of war stamps and bonds. They reported the war admirably, operating under; a voluntary code of censorable. They strengthened the spirity of the people at home and the moral of the flighting forces allowed. Last Friday alternoon at two o'clock a car driven by Robert Mazzola of Detroit, crashed into the rear end of the automobile of Mrs. Paul Calkins, 2233s Power Avenue, as she was stopped at the intersection of Grand River and Farmington Road.

Mazzola had just come from the garage, and had a receipt which he showed police, for adjusting the brakes on his car. However, yhen he applied the brakes to stop, he found no brakes at all on his automobile.
