Shop Boys Enter Cabinet Business

In the shop class the boys are busy on a cabinet that will hold records in the school's history. They are still working on book cases, which have been a project since the early part of the year. LaVerne Wadenslater and Lawrence Scott are making one for Miss McCarthy.

Since the sander is broken and parts to fix it are not immediately available, production is being held up. P.A.E.

Carpenter At Gym Irons Out Rough Road

No more splinters in the toes of dancers. No more stumbling in grooves. The bumpy road taken to meet the audiences will be smoothed. Yes, you guessed it. There's a new floor on the stage in the gym.

Over the Christmas holidays, Mr. Fred Schaeper, carpenter, laid the fir wood in replacing the old floor, which was in bad shape. The wood must be sanded in order to fasten down stage props, this being the reason for the splintering and chipping of the timber.

Tread lightly, kids! M. Y.

NEW THRILL FOR READERS

Agnes Turnbull's "The Day Must Dawn" is a thrill packed drama about Indians, pioneer settlements and the usual bloody Indian wars.

In the year 1777 the small settlement of Hanover, set deep within the forests of western Pennsylvania, fought bitterly against renegade savages and the hardships of a desolated wilderness. But all is not serious. Humorous characters and Sam Craig's singing, weaving in and out of the various chapters, breaks the heavy tension.

Because she enjoyed the novel so much and thought high school readers would also, Miss Ruth Bailey donated this copy to the school library. D. S. K.

HERE AND THERE WITH THE ALUMNI OF F. H. S.

Snow, ice, snow, and more snow, what weather! But then, the snow doesn't seem to affect romance any. Elsa Nyström is now engaged to Al Dunkel, and Marilyn Thurston to Bill Monagan.

But Elsa doesn't spend all her time getting engaged. She sings every Saturday night on the acorn on Youth program in the Don Large chorus. It's pretty nice to have someone from Farmington on the air brings it closer to home.

Speaking of singing, I wonder if Laura Hutton gets serenaded every night? She moved into the new dorm at Michigan State, and her room opens out onto a big balcony. Woo, woo!

In and in connection with moving, Lois Schroll has come to Farmington, Michigan, to join her folks. She has been working in Detroit and living with Sally Stringer and Virginia Smith. Perhaps that old saying, "There's no place like home," is true.

We've had some pretty nice news in Journalism recently: Al Walbank, majoring in bacteriology, and Audrey Letourneau, in education (both from M.S.C.) Audrey tested our voices and gave us some good advice about what was wrong and how to correct it. We went around saying "ahhh" the whole hour. They had dropped in for a couple of chats, too.

I'll close now. Be good, and don't strain your backs shovelling. P. L.

Debaters End Season

Last Tuesday the Farmington Debate squad was host to the Clarenceville group for a practice debate. This was not judged, but was helpful to both teams.

Thursday, January 8, found our debaters vigorously defending their issues in their final league debate of the season. The boys' team were members of Jackson High School, Jackson, Michigan. Both teams resulted in losses for F.H.S. squads. P. H.
