They're working on telephone equipment for FARMINGTON

BELL System factories are turning out telephone equipment at the fastest rate ever in order to catch up with the huge nation-wide demand for service.
A lot of folks right here in this community are waiting for telephones simply because we haven't enough switching equipment to serve them—or enough wire and cable to connect their homes with the central office.
The additional equipment we need is "on order," but it must be tailor-made to work with present facilities—all of which takes time to do.
But you can be sure that just as fast as we can get it installed and in service, more people here will have the telephones they want.

WASHINGTON DIGEST

tion is now certain. It means that the people responsible for the destiny of the United States know that the year of decision is here, the decision having been made not in Washington, but in the Kremlin, just as the decision to fight Japan was made, not in Washington, but in the office of one of the great leaders of the Japanese government.
Today the Marshall plan is the subject of fiery debate in congress. But the Marshall plan is only one small package of the "White Man's Burden" that Kipling chanted about. Whether it works or not, it is only one beam of a temple which the American giant is supporting on his shoulters. If he falters, the temple will fall, and he will be crushed beneath its ruins.

Today it is fashionable to make funny cartoons about the "third party" announced in December by Henry Wallace. Yet that third party fits neatly into a plan to wreck our way of life, the plan, another part of which was the careful coaching by the Kremlin of the "partisan" fighters in World War II. The partisans were formed, first to help beat down one of the Soviet's enemies, but they also were groomed to destroy representative government in their respective countries.

PARTISANS SUCCEEDED IN SOVIET SPHERE

The partisans were most successful in the territories nearest Russia, in territory where the Red Army, in the guise of allies fighting a common enemy, gained a foothold which they kept when peace came, and which was used to put their traitor stogies into power.
In Italy and France, they were unable to capture completely the partisan or resistance movements. But they did get a grip on both countries which neither France nor Italy dared throw off until the United States made a tacit condition of aid. The expulsion of the Communist parties from both governments.

Temporarily, at least that much of the carefully-planned Soviet program failed. But new steps are being planned. A part of the pattern of communication is Communist alliances with the left-wing non-Communists. The Reds cooperate with their objectives, then slowly dominate and absorb them. One method Communist left-wing resistance is to help a reactionary government suppress the non-Communist left-wingers, and pushes those surviving deeper into Communist folds.

That is where the Wallace third party fits into the Kremlin design. The Reds hope it will split and weaken the liberals in this country, increase the friction between them and the conservatives as much as possible, aid the conservatives to get into power. Then when the reaction sets in, the conservatives will be thrown out, and the well-organized Communists can take over easily.

Greece is a testing point in the Russian-American struggle. The only way in which the Communist internal aggression there could be checked was for Britain and the United States to step in and actually direct the Greek government. That was done. Much as any country dislikes having a stronger one run its affairs, the United States, as a choice of evils, is the less welcome to the Greeks, especially when we come bearing gifts without which the government knows it cannot resist the Communist organization.

When one talks with the "exiles," the refugees from the Red terror, one is appalled by their attitude. Recalled was for Britain and the United States to step in and actually direct the Greek government. That was done. Much as any country dislikes having a stronger one run its affairs, the United States, as a choice of evils, is the less welcome to the Greeks, especially when we come bearing gifts without which the government knows it cannot resist the Communist organization.

There is a desperation about the attitude of these men who fought the losing battle against the Kremlin. They say there is absolutely no hope for Europe unless the Russians are driven back to their old borders, and the Balkan states, Poland and Finland are freed of Russian domination. They say there is only one thing that will have effect: A threat by the United States to use force.

When the quotation of the London official which I mentioned, stating that the United States and Britain were committed to "measures short of war" came over the wires, I was reminded of the conversation with the former foreign minister.

He had said to me: "If the United States threatens to use force now, the Russians will pull out of Eastern Europe. They cannot afford war now. They fear the United States. But in a few years, more threats will not suffice. The Russians then will be ready to fight."

And this force moving against the "political and economic religion of all sensible men" is moving not only in Europe. All along Russia's periphery, the red tide is rising against its frontiers, in the Middle East, in India whose gates

QUALITY IS VITAL IN PREPACKAGING OF FRESH PRODUCE

Quality consciousness is developing in the produce industry as a result of prepackaging, according to Robert L. Carlson, specialist in horticulture at Michigan State college.
Prepackaging can lead to more palatable and nutritious foods on the housewives table. Carlson assures. Mechanical injury and market handling has made it difficult for growers to offer for sale quality crops which are more perishable than lower grade crops. The protection offered by prepackaging will make it easier to produce quality crops for commercial use.
Chemical treatments, proper packaging and methods of refrigeration can be combined to control, to some extent, the natural processes which cause eventual deterioration of foods. This promises market products which will maintain their freshness and high quality for longer periods of time.
The horticulture specialist advises that definite standards of quality, sanitation and measurement be established for the good of the consumer and industry.
Russia has threatened for centuries, in China, Korea, in the islands adjacent to Japan.
The force which threatened Western ideas were held back, sometimes brutally, sometimes with silver bullets, and sometimes with a friendly and guiding hand, as long as Britannia ruled the waves. America, on her isolated continents, was safe. But today, England's sea power is broken, the air is a wide, short highway, the awful power of the fissioned atom has been set loose. The red tide will rise as surely as the moon-drawn seas. Only a United Nations can stem it, nations united willingly, or at the behest of the United States.
