VETERAN STUDENTS HAVE JULY 1 DEADLINE FOR RETROACTIVE PAYMENTS

Veterans pursuing full-time courses in schools and colleges who are entitled to increased subsistence rates by reason of dependency have until July 1, to submit proof for retroactive payments.

If veterans submit evidence by July 1, they will receive retroactive payments at the now rates back to April 1. Evidence received after that date will be effective the day of receipt.

New rates now in effect allow veterans with one dependent the sum of $105 a month and $120 for those with more than one dependent. Single veterans receive $75. Eligible veterans now in school who are entitled to $75 or $105 do not have to apply because Veterans Administration officials have the information required to pay the increases automatically.

Proof of additional dependency for the new increased amounts consists of photographs or certified copies of birth in the case of dependent children and evidence of actual dependency in the case of dependent parents.

state agencies be merged into not more than 20 state departments whereby the governor would appoint all department heads?

With these proposed reforms, Michigan voters will have plenty to decide in 1948.

Rebuffed by the state legislature when they fled in 1945, the Governor Sigler has announced he would take the issue direct to the people.

"The legislators' decisions indicate that the debate will be vigorous. More centralized power in the hands of the governor will be contested within his party. Not even the governor's so-called 'cabinet' is unanimous in his support. The fight will be lively."

POULTRY FEED BILL CUT BY PASTURE USE

An estimate that 15 per cent of the feed bill for poultry can be saved by the use of juicy green grass is made by J. M. Moore, extension poultryman at Michigan State college.

Dried grass has little value for poultry. Chickens, unlike other animals, will not go far afield for their pasture. Moore advises that this means bringing the pasture to the birds by moving the brooder house or summer shelter two or three times during the range season.

The type of grass used should be such that it is green and succulent during July, August and September. Often mowing the poultry range once or twice during these months will result in new growth starting. Growing stock must be placed on a green range in the winter months because pastures contaminated with parasites and disease germs. A range where no chickens have been pastured for two years is described as "clean" and can be used to produce well-grown, full-developed pullets that will produce a profit.

Alfalfa and broome pasture has proven to be one of the good poultry pastures. Since broome grass matted sod that provides juicy forage and keeps the young chickens off the soil, alfalfa is unappreciated in the dry summer months when many grasses are not available.

Some poultrymen, Moore states, allow their pullets to go without alfalfa and grain from 2 to 4 p.m. daily in order to induce the flock to make better use of their pasture.

Michigan farmers will have an opportunity to learn more about the management of grass and long-usage pastures at the Grass Day programs planned for all sections of the state during June. County agricultural agents and NIS extension workers will be on hand to sell farmers how pasture can help to make the poultry enterprise more profitable.

WASHINGTON DIGEST . . .

mand rang out. The troops snapped to present arms; the officer saluted and drew a manuscript from his tunic, something new to the eyes of the artist-fancy.

"I had thought of it as a painting of General Washington reading a message to his troops (and I always had thought that was a flight of the artist's fancy)."

The officer began reading—it was a message of welcome all right. Finally my companion (he was half-English, which may explain his fortitude) interrupted. "There must be some mistake. We are two radio correspondents."

The commander bowed, looked abashed, glanced over our heads toward the plane.

"But where are the other gentlemen?" he wanted to know.

"There are just two of us," we replied.

"But the minister of propaganda? Who is representing him? We were notified by the department—a special plane—the truck for the baggage—"

We explained briefly, and waited for the skies to fall. They didn't.

The officer continued his speech without even dropping his monocle. Just to be sure—editing it tightly to make it apply as he went. There was no question that he thought we were going to be, certainly OUGHT to be Goebbels.

The formation melted away, the truck which had been requested to transport sound equipment started to load, all but one of the staff cars slunk away. There was only one red, the airforce commander's, and he felt no embarrassment, and was pure military field and had held up the German war effort for half an hour. It was a victory over America was in the war.

For the rest, the only significant memory, except for my interview with those British boys, was the questioning by the German officers. Obviously they didn't share the complacent assurance of victory of the Nazi higher-ups—they remembered World War I.

Today the greatest danger to the peace is the possibility that the will, the purpose, the power of the United States will not be understood in time by the Russian command—that they will fail to recognize the risk of self-annihilation they are taking in their "cold war," as the Kaiser and Hitler failed to realize it.

ROSES, BUT NEVER A SPRAY OF VEIV

There are many good garden books, and I for one had about

P. K. Dedrick invented a continuous form of hay press in 1972.

come to the conclusion that the final word on gardening had been written, when along came the Woman's Home Companion Garden Book (P. F. Collier and Son corporation, publisher, New York City) with many new angles. Edited by C. C. Winter, director of the Arthur Hoyt Scott horticultural foundation, Swarthmore college, this book speaks with authority.

"It is correct," it states on page 472, to speak of narcissus, and also correct to use the English term daffodil for all species and varieties of narcissus. There is confusion about this, a popular impression being that daffodils are the yellow kind, and narcissus the white kinds. There also has been confusion about the name jonquil. All the daffodils of the jonquil group are distinguished by their narrow, garlic-like foliage and by their characteristic light yellow color, which is the same shade throughout the flower."

All of this interested me mightily as I had just been studying a photograph of a clump of narcissus in a popular magazine's "name this picture" contest. The leaves on the plant shown were broad, though the answer given by the editor was "jonquil." Obviously, even contest editors may err.

The narcissus discussion is a sample of Wister's directness in this new garden book and there is more like it on every page.

Next, the least interesting writing in this book is the foreword by the well-loved Liberty Hyde Bailey, dean of all gardeners, whose accomplishments need no eulogy here.

Another intriguing feature is the discussion and diagramming of various geographic areas according to their geological and climatic conditions. Most of us have been frost-bitten too often for comfort by blindly following the usual maps.

Additional data and measuring qualities have been added to long-established material in making a broader and yet more personal presentation of his problems to the gardener in any given section of the United States and Canada. The net result is the clarification of many heretofore vague statements.

It would be unfair to offer excellent books to say that this is the best garden book yet published. In some ways it exceeds all others, but still there are other volumes which may contain more information on specific subjects.

Perhaps the way to size up this 1,000-page volume is to say that if you are a serious gardener, you need this one too if you seek fresh angles on your favorite hobby.
