Shopping Hints
For Buying Linens
If you're going shopping for troussing linens or for replacements for worn out linens you need to consider both quantity and quality. Ask yourself, "how many", and "what kind", and then be ready to shop wisely, advises Josephine Hoke, Home demonstration agent. For example a safe and sane rule is six sheets for each bed and three cases for each pillow.

For towels, the rule is two of each type in use, two on the shelf and two in the laundry at all times — that's six towels for each family member. Of kitchen towels you need lots — one dozen linen glass towels, two dozen dish towels and one dozen dish cloths.

In buying sheets there's no economy in being skimpy about size. Get them long enough and wide enough to make a bed comfortable and neat. Know the length, width and thickness of your mattress before you buy your sheets. Recommended length is 105 inches and the width varies from single to double bed.
