Sauces Make Ideal Combination With Mild Flavored Veal Cuts

The delicate, mild flavor of veal makes it an ideal meat to serve with rich, colorful sauces and gravies. Says Reba Stagg, well known home economist.

And, since veal is best cooked by slow moist heat, it is simple to prepare the sauces in the pan with the meat.

Braised veal cuts such as chops, steaks and cutlets are given added flavor served with tomatoes, gravy and onions. Sliced carrots, which are soaked in the liquid in which the veal is cooked makes another pleasing accompaniment.

Or the combination of vinegar, chipped pickles and cayenne is unusual and tasty.

For quick additions that go equally well with the young veal, condensed tomato soup or cream of mushroom soup can be used. Sour cream makes a delicious gravy to serve with moist veal chops.

Margaret Wolfe, daughter of 2340 1/2 Lenox, has graduated from Wayne College of Nursing, Detroit. She also received training at St. Joseph Mercy Hospital, Detroit, and was in affiliation with Children's Hospital, Detroit, and Mercy Hospital, Ann Arbor.

Margaret attended Our Lady of Sorrows school and was graduated from Farmington High School.

Mrs. Edward Stelniker and daughter, Mrs. Roy Habrister, 1111 1/2 S. of Fenlont and Mrs. Paul Larcher, 1111 1/2 S. of Fenlont, John, were callers at the Harry Brown home on Eight Mile Tuesday.

Most fruits go well with veal, explains Miss Stagg. But prunes are especially good. They can be stewed and served along with the meat or as a salad. Fruits or broiled pineapple slices, sliced applesauce and pear halves filled with cream cheese rich close in point of view. Cranberries and raisins in particular must not be overlooked for their color and taste appeal.

Noodles prepared in the veal broth is a favorite Hungarian dish. The noodles can be given a different taste cooked with a little chopped onion or celery salt.

CREAM PUFFS LATEST IN PARTY FARE

It's the month of brides, and amorous showering her with gifts, tasty cream puffs can be the ideal refreshment.

Cream puffs are actually quite simple to make, and shortened with lard they are rich and flavorful, says Reba Stagg, home economist.

Being versatile is another point in their flavor. They can be large or midget size, and they are equally delicious served as an appetizer, dessert or as a main dish.

Either tiny cream puffs — the dough dropped by a small tea-spoon into a greased baking sheet — or the larger conventional cream puffs can have widely varied fillings. For the main dish or for appetizers they can be filled with meat salad or creamed meat. For dessert the filling can be sweetened whipped cream, chocolate cream, various flavored custards or even ice cream.
