

PERUNA A TONIC OF GREAT USEFULNESS.

H. B. THARIN.

Hon. E. B. Tharin, Attorney at Law and counsel for Anti-Trust League, writes from Pennsylvania Ave., N. W., Washington, D. C., as follows:

"Having used Peruna for catarrhal disorders, I am able to testify to its great medicinal excellence and do not hesitate to give it my emphatic endorsement and earnest recommendation to all persons affected by that disorder. It is a tonic of great usefulness."

Mr. T. Barncott, (West Aymer Ontario, Can., writes: "Last winter I was ill with pneumonia after having a gripe. I took Peruna for two months, and I became quite well. I also induced a young lady, who was ill from a cold and confined to the house, to take Peruna, and after taking Peruna for three months she is able to take her usual work of tailoring. I can recommend Peruna for all such who are ill and require a tonic."

PERUNA TABLETS.

Some people prefer to take tablets rather than to take medicine in a fluid form. Such people can obtain Peruna Tablets which represent the solid medicinal ingredients of Peruna. Each tablet is equivalent to one average dose of Peruna.

BABY'S ITCHING HUMOR.

Nothing Would Help Him—Mother Almost in Despair—Owes Quick Cure to Cuticura.

"Several months ago, my little boy began to break out with itching sores. I doctored him, but as soon as I got him healed up in one place they would break out in another. I was almost in despair. I could not get anything that would help him. Then I began to use Cuticura-Soap and Cuticura Ointment, and after using them three times, the sores commenced to heal. He is now well, and not a scar is left on his body. They have never returned nor left him with bad blood, as one would think. Cuticura Remedies are the best I have ever tried, and I shall highly recommend them to any one who is suffering likewise. Wm. William Gooding, 107 Washington St., Attica, Ind., July 22, 1907."

His Lucid Answers.

They were asking the eminent lawyer how they took such a large fee from the trust.

"I think it was its largeness that made it easy to take," he smilingly answered.

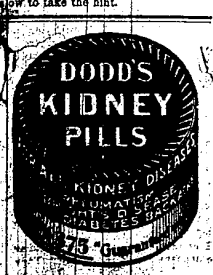

Then the state's attorneys conferred.

"And didn't you stop to consider that the money was tainted?" they asked him.

"No," he ingenuously replied, "I only stopped to count it."

This closed the proceedings for the day.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Pericles P. Pemberton: Cured
By Jessie Reno Odlin

(Copyright, by Storytory Pub. Co.)

Miss Cordelia was neither tall nor short, plump nor slender. She was a well-proportioned, well-poised woman, dainty in dress and manner. Her hair was not a yellow face, and yet the smooth, fair skin showed no telltale wrinkles.

The clearing was not large, not quite ten acres; yet, lying as it did in the midst of the great forest, it was a beautiful and restful sight to guests on chance travels. It seemed to Miss Cordelia when she returned from her brief and infrequent visits to the little town three miles away.

Ten years before, would his only daughter, Pericles Pythagos Pemberton had left his Illinois home, left lifelong friends and neighbors to try his chance with fortune in the booming Puget sound country. At first his aspirations seemed likely to be realized, in a short time he had acquired wealth and reputation as a prominent, pushing capitalist in a town of mushroom growth and marvelous promises.

As for his daughter, she remained over a pretentious, well-appointed home, having her heart's content of every procurable luxury, and every dainty ducery of social gayerly, that tempting attraction to her only daughter. She was also enough and to spare.

And then—well, things began to change. Money did not flow in such uninterrupted streams. Deftable cords desired in vain with unheard of eagerness. Stock companies seemed to declare dividends, and then one by one, ceased to exist at all banks failed, real estate companies disintegrated, and one enterprise after another sank to liquidation.

The population melted away perceptibly. Whole blocks of stores and office buildings were vacated, and the wharves began to assume a forlorn and deserted appearance. The constant of the residents, dismayed, bewildered, trying in vain to stem the current, finally found them practically stranded and forced to the stupendous realization that the bottom had fallen out of the boom.

When the actual truth of the situation was borne in upon Pericles P. Pemberton, all his life financial ambitions, all his energy, all his interest was gone in one breath, and he turned, hopeless, confused, defeated, to Cordelia. There seemed but one thing left to do, and Cordelia determined to do it. But she need not have feared opposition from her father. He was as clay in her hands, passive, disinterested. So they moved to a little half cleared ranch in the Skagit valley, taking such of their household goods as seemed necessary, converting all else into money. This ranch Pericles had in prosperous days justly opened out to them a haven of rest and refuge from the business world.

So Miss Cordelia, with her quiet, unassuming but not the household, the limited financial affairs, which by unquestioning her father, who grew more dependent and childish as the months went by.

On this particular evening Pericles was sitting deeply engrossed in thought when Cordelia, her evening tasks completed, took down the lamp, lighted it and prepared to enjoy a newly won machine.

"Cordelia," said the old man, at last.

"Yes, father?" questioningly.

"I have a very important matter to discuss with you. I have been thinking about it for some time, and I have decided to do it."

"I am not sure, father," said Miss Cordelia, that Mr. Pemberton had decided to do it. "I have been thinking about it for some time, and I have decided to do it."

SIBERIA'S MANY LARGE CITIES.
They Are a Surprise to the American Visitor.

One is continually surprised at finding such large, prosperous cities in Siberia, writes Prof. G. E. Blakelee in the Boston Transcript. Omsk has some 55,000 inhabitants. On 25,000, Tomsk 75,000, Krasniarsk 35,000 and Irkutsk 60,000. In many ways, however, they still show the crudeness of frontier life. In Omsk hardly a house is over one story high, and the dirt in the unpaved streets lies some inches thick. On the other hand, there is a large number of schools in the country. Tomsk is the educational center, besides being the largest city. It has an institute of technology and a university of some reputation, which is attended by several hundred students.

After traveling for days over the level, monotonous plains of the west, it is a pleasure to reach the borders of the hill country, which stretches from Krasniarsk some hundred miles to Lake Baikal. One's first enthusiasm one is tempted to exclaim that Krasniarsk is one of the most beautiful cities in the world. It certainly is charmingly located, reminding one of many a town on the Rhine. It is built in the valley where the Katschka flows into the great Yenisei—mountains on every side, and the high banks of the river above and below. Seen from a distance, with its many church domes glistening between the hills, it makes the most delightful picture of all Siberia.

A further ride of a day and a half through this hill country, much of it in the hands of the Chinese, through pine, brings one to Irkutsk, which after Tomsk is the largest city in Siberia. It is in many ways a very attractive place. Its main streets are paved, and it is lighted by electricity. It has three daily papers, a large theater, a handsome art museum, a technical school, a theological seminary, 20 churches and one of the most imposing cathedrals in the whole empire. There are two or three factories in the city, one of which is a porcelain establishment, which turns out some excellent work. In strolling through the business streets one is surprised at the great variety of goods displayed in the stores, especially at the real elegance of the silver and jewelry establishments. There are many American stores to be seen—Kodak, sewing machines, typewriters, gramophones, trunks, tools from Massachusetts, canned fruit from California, canned oysters from Maryland, in some of the show windows were pyramids of boxes of American food products, each with a Russian label and a representation of the American and the Russian flags.

Irkutsk is over 3,500 miles from Moscow, a distance greater than that which separates San Francisco from New York, yet it is only two-thirds of the way to Vladivostok.

English travelers on the frontier between China and Russia recently found the various villages at war with one another. One traveler, George Horner, writes: "The men of Jili were at war with their neighbors, and indeed we watched the progress of the fight during our trip. The cause was the theft of some cattle and a whole army corps, consisting of 150 warriors, had been mobilized. These fellows, with their grotesque ornaments of silver, deer horns, peacock and cowrie, their blackened faces, their flowing hempen robes, their war bows five feet long, their war swords five feet long, and their broad shields five feet high, moved like a line of ants, their ranks in the valley, and a fierce bombardment of opprobrious epithets was maintained, but neither side got farther than exchanging and stringing lower un the air arrived at the end of the day, when the combatants dispersed to their respective homes."

A Personal Opinion.

The constitutional dislike to giving an opinion on any subject, which had always distinguished the Grahm family, reached its fullest development in Abel Grahm. He could scarcely be persuaded to express his mind freely about anything, still less about any person. But he managed to preserve a reputation for keen discernment.

"I really wish you'd tell me what you think of young Hobbs," said one of the summer residents. "Come, Mr. Grahm, I mean to give the young man a lift if he's worth it."

"Mum," said Mr. Grahm, with his usual deliberation. "When you come to lifting, anybody that can be lifted with lifting, seems to me. As to Pete Hobbs, I'm expecting he'll turn out just about such a sort of a man as I take him to be. I don't know as I'm called upon to speak any plainer's than—YOUTH'S COMPANION."

Mourn for Dead Octopus.

New York has just finished its official mourning for Jonathan. The Jonrook was the pet octopus of the city aquarium. Jonrook went to the wicker metropolis with four companions from the Bermudas. He was the last survivor, for his companions drowned, one after another and their multiple arms ceased the restless task of grabbing everything in sight.

A military funeral was given Jonrook. The first day the aquarium building was placed at half-mast and marks of respect were displayed. It was the plan to sprinkle salt bark in the harbor to deaden the noise of the ships, but this was abandoned. The obsequies were as peaceful as possible under the circumstances.

He Would Talk.

"This is a busy place," I tell you," roared the excited man in the telephone booth.

And from the other end of the wire came this:

"I don't care, I will talk."

"Get off the wire!" shouted the other, beside himself. "You don't want to talk with me!"

But it was no use.

"I've paid ten cents to talk," came the answer, and I'm going to do it!"

And talk he did, busy wire or not.
