Plan Natural Setting For Best Landscaping

"If there's a secret to good landscaping, it's to reproduce the natural environment for growing things," counsels Bernard Margolis of Sabra Landscape and Supply in Livonia.

New homeowners should carefully plan-out-the-landscaping-effects they want around their house even before it is built. If you're wondering what you can achieve with your new lot, Margolis, who coordinated the Garden Show now at the Livonia Mall, advises the services of a professional landscape architect or designer.

For between $150 and $300 a landscaping plan will be drawn up especially for your house. In the long run it will eliminate countless problems as well as providing your house with a unique natural setting that will forever enhance its beauty.

A well thought out landscape plan, according to Margolis, can effectively fulfill the most common needs of the suburban homeowner, such as:

- the proper setting for a children's play area
- the best place for trash can storage
- how to successfully screen your house for privacy
- which kind of fruit trees will best grow on your site
- a dog run which will keep your dog, as well as your neighbor, happy
- what to do if your neighbor's house seems to dominate yours

- which plants will provide you with color during the various seasons
- the proper setting for an outdoor deck or patio.

Margolis, who has been in landscaping since his childhood days and who studied it at Michigan State University, feels that good landscaping should make use of the existing natural setting.

"This is a beautiful area," he explained. "People should fit their homes to their sites and have a landscaping plan in mind even before construction begins. In this way there will be a minimum amount of damage done to existing trees and plants."

"HOMEOWNERS SHOULD BE students of nature," Margolis continued. "Putting a plant in the wrong place will destroy it. You simply can't force a plant to grow in an unnatural setting."

Many ambitious and elaborate landscaping plans have gone to seed because they proved too difficult to keep up.

"If you don't create a landscape that's easy to maintain, you're kidding yourself," warned Margolis.

The best landscaping is that which requires the least amount of upkeep. Margolis points to the setting of the Observer Newspapers office, which was designed by garden writer Betty
