STATE POLICE TO INCREASE PATROLS OVER WEEK END

State Police patrols will be on the highways in increased numbers to handle the unusually heavy traffic expected over the Memorial Day week end.
In connection, Commissioner Donald S. Leonard issued an urgent plea to drivers to be especially careful.
"Although the traffic death rate has shown a decrease in Michigan," he said, "there has been a substantial increase in the number of accidents and persons injured. Drivers are the ones who must be depended upon to reduce these figures."
"There were 14 persons killed on Michigan highways during the Memorial holiday period last year. This was five less than the 1948 total of 19, but nine more than the low record of five in 1944. We should aim at an even lower record than that of 1944."
"Persons taking trips should plan start early so they will have plenty of time to reach their destination. The same should be true of their return home."
"Make sure your car is in good operating condition, drive with the normal flow of traffic, observe all signs and be alert at all times. In short, be doubly careful and enjoy a safe holiday week end."
State Police patrols will be intensified during peak traffic periods as they occur in various sections of the state. Traffic is expected to be heavy Saturday and Sunday, slack off on Monday, and again reach a peak on Tuesday, Memorial Day.
