EDITORIALS

An All Out Effort . . .

is being made, we understand, by the City of Livonia to secure a badly needed post office. The leaders in the newly formed city deserve a great deal of credit for their ambition to better serve their community.

The Enterprise doesn't want to take anything away from their effort, but we do want to point to this example. Farmington, too, is urgently in need of a new post office. We need it in order to properly serve an ever-increasing population. Commendable efforts have been made in the past by a few people to secure these vital facilities. But one thing has hindered the realization of a new post office in Farmington — namely — the failure to obtain the united effort of all of the leaders in the community.

This is not true in just this one effort, but it is best exemplified here. Before Farmington can get those things it most needs, weight must be added in its behalf. Weight that only Farmington itself can supply through its leaders. We can sit here and get along or we can get up and move ahead. Only a year or so ago letters were forwarded to representatives in Congress in the interest of a new post office for Farmington. The Farmington Enterprise editorially and in the news columns tried to add weight to the issue. It was also picked up by the Pontiac Press, but the leaders in the community missed the opportunity and we still have no new post office. While these events were taking place, other communities were getting improved postal facilities through a united community effort.

Today the Farmington Post Office is serving over 18,000 people on 8 routes plus 2 city carrier routes. It is trying to serve this number of people with totally inadequate facilities.

If Farmington is to get a new post office, it must sell itself. The facts are clear and available, but a united effort must be made to make them heard. It is a job only we, the people of the Farmington area, can do. It is ours to let slide or get up and do something about.

all across and up down Michigan. We mean the battle of words, not bullets. The battle of politics. Early indications point to a rough and ready contest and it is time you and your neighbor prepared for it. The first step in the preparation is to resolve right now that you go to the polls in the September Primary and the November General Election.

You will go if you call yourself an American. You will go if you consider this democracy of ours worth protecting. This is no time to settle back in the rocking chair and let George do it. Your future and the future of your country is dependent on strength. One of the weakest fronts in our democracy has been at the polls. Let's resolve right now to make it the strongest, starting in September.

It is also our responsibility as Americans to vote honestly and intelligently. Let's encourage clean, informative campaign speeches — not wild mud-slinging politics. Let's demand the facts from our candidates. Americans are interested in what a candidate is going to do — not what his or her opponent hasn't done. Voters are intelligent enough to draw their conclusions for themselves. They want facts, not an eye full of political mud.

Candidates can do much to encourage voters to go to the polls. They can intelligently lead, they can stimulate interest, they can graphically portray the facts. They can do it without turning the campaign into a circus. This only creates disgust and makes democracy a tool instead of a powerful machine of the people.

You are in the limelight, Mr. Voter. The candidate is talking and listening to you. Express yourself to him, tell him the kind of campaign you want — one of facts and sense. And above all else, express yourself at the polls — for a stronger, more firm democratic way of life. It's up to you!

God Outranks Governments
In America we have established the principle of the separation between church and state. But the recognition of God is basic in our American foundations. As an example, our coins are inscribed, "In God We Trust." Still further proof can be seen in the fact that the President takes his oath of office with his hand upon the Bible; witnesses are also sworn in with a Bible oath in our courts.

All of this goes to prove that we recognize a higher law than the law of the state — a standard of right by which the state itself is judged.

HISTORIC CONVERSATION

Considering the fact that they are members of opposite political parties and were rival candidates for the presidency, General MacArthur and President Truman have coordinated on the Korean crisis exceptionally well. In fact, they get along better than some of MacArthur's fellow generals in the Pentagon building, whom "Doug" sometimes treats with highbrowed disdain.

Jesus, who said, "Render to Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and to God the things that are God's." Jesus said this when the Palatium was under the power of Rome and His enemies tried to trap Him with the question whether it was lawful to pay tribute to Caesar or not. If Jesus had said, "No," His enemies would have reported Him to the Roman authorities; if He had said "Yes," they would have reported Him to the Jewish authorities.

conversations were held between MacArthur and the White House in the first stages of the Korean War. The first was the night before Truman issued his world-shaking announcement that American forces would intervene. The second was four days later when MacArthur gave an extremely gloomy picture of the Korean military rout and asked for permission to land ground troops. When MacArthur made this proposal, Pentagon officials teletyped back the suggestion that he make a formal request.

MacArthur replied crisply: "Consider it my request. Permission was immediately granted."

MacArthur talked on the telecom in somewhat the same stilted language he uses in his now famous communications. He did not speak disparagingly of the South Koreans but used such phrases as "the Koreans in their efforts to resist communism" must be helped.

Secretary of the Army Frank Pace stayed in the communications room in the Pentagon building during the second conversation with MacArthur and phoned the White House to direct for decisions that were over his head.

In his first conversation with the White House, MacArthur was full of optimism, and informed Truman that he could "guarantee" success whether Russia intervened in Korea or not.

MACARTHUR PESSIMISTIC
In his second conversation held just after MacArthur had flown to Korea, he was quite pessimistic; in fact, much more so than the official communications issued in Tokyo. MacArthur had already proceeded to bomb North Korea before asking Washington for permission which caused some embarrassment, since, when the North Koreans claimed their air base was bombed, Washington had emphatically denied it.

It also caused worry in the state department because of the understandable desire to operate in close coordination with the United Nations.

MICHIGAN MIRROR

By GENE ALLEMAN

"An Anti-Governor Williams move is afoot in the state," reports the Grand Rapids Press.

Music for the conclusion was an attack made by Charles F. Edgecomb of Detroit, president of the Michigan Truman club and Wayne county auditor, against the Americans for Democratic Action unit in the state. Speaking at a Grand Rapids Democratic rally, Edgecomb assailed the Michigan ADA segment of the Democratic party as being "Marxist missionaries."

We quote the Press: "Edgecomb asserted the ADA has taken over the Democratic party in Michigan, Minnesota and Connecticut and that it has 'unduly influenced' the executive branch of our state government."

"The speaker, former housing director of Detroit, declared the ADA, in Michigan led by Hicks Griffiths, former state chairman of the Democratic party, had tried to defeat President Truman in his bid for the Democratic nomination in 1948 and in the state has left nothing undone" to weaken, supersede, circumvent and in effect destroy the position of authority of our national committee, George Fitzgerald. Fitzgerald was elected national committeeman at the 1948 convention.

"Praising President Truman as an 'average American selling an American program,' Edgecomb likened Lt. Gov. John W. Connolly to the president.

"One breath of political fresh air you get as you pass through the enroute to Grand Rapids is the honesty and the integrity of Connolly and Roth (Attorney General Stephen J. Roth) and a few others who have studiously avoided entanglements with intellectual phonies," declared Edgecomb.

"Because of the impossibility of working with Democrats under Crittfield in Michigan, a large group under the leadership of our national committeeman formed the Truman Democratic Club of Michigan," the speaker added.

"It was then that Edgecomb made it clear that as long as Governor Williams associates with the ADA, he would be opposed by a segment of Michigan Democrats."

The reporter for the Grand Rapids newspaper then related how (Continued on Page Eight)

Looking Back Through The Enterprise Files

FORTY YEARS AGO (August 5, 1910)

Illustrated Lecture

In the Town Hall Saturday morning, August 20, Rev. George McIlwain, Unitarian of Middleboro, Massachusetts, will deliver a lecture based on a recent visit in Spain. The lecture will be illustrated by over 100 colored limelight views. These slides have been colored by the best painters in New York. Special attention is paid to the painting of the great painter Murillo.

Bad Accident

Passengers on the 7 o'clock west-bound car Monday had their nerves more or less shattered by an accident that occurred when Mr. Carnahan, of Greenfield, drove out of his yard, directly in front of the oncoming car. His horse was killed instantly, his wagon and farm produce, which he was taking to market, was demolished and Carnahan himself was quite badly hurt. It was raining hard at the time which possibly accounted for Mr. Carnahan's not noticing the approach of the car.

Semi-Pro Baseball Finals Here

The final game in the state Semi-Pro baseball tournament will be held in Farmington on Saturday, August 10, announces H. F. Brennan, district executive. A good fast baseball game is expected when the Detroit Stars, champions of the City tournament held recently, do battle with the Garden City Merchants, the outfit that walked away with the Farmington tourney. The winner of the game Saturday will get the state crown and will be eligible to enter the play-offs for the national tournament. The "play ball" signal will come at 3:30 p.m. at the high school diamond.
