

County May Have New TV Station

Oakland County can look forward to its own television on a new station which may be built under a plan of the Federal Communications Commission.

The FCC plan, which has just been adopted, calls for 64 new stations in Michigan. Most of them will operate in the ultra-high frequency range, which is an untapped section of the radio spectrum. Use of this UHF band and expansion of the present VHF service should eventually permit nearly 2,000 new television stations in every section of the nation. The 108 television stations now operating in the United States are in the VHF range.

"The adoption of the UHF plan in conjunction with the expansion of VHF means the beginning of a truly nationwide television service with visual entertainment and education brought to remote areas from the nearest cities," stated Dr. C. B. Joffe, who helped pioneer the development of UHF television. "We are ready to build the transmitting and receiving equipment to bring about this national television service."

The FCC decision to use UHF for television is based on years of scientific research and on field tests.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Connelly, the white House secretary, who has become one of the busiest busy-bodies in Washington.

Originally Connelly picked his old friend McGranery to become chairman of the Democratic National Committee, replacing Bill Boyce. Then he discovered that ex-Senator Francis Myers of Pennsylvania and Democratic committeeman David Lawrence, the mayor of Pittsburgh, were down on McGranery, so Connelly boosted Frank McKinley into the party chairmanship instead.

McGranery also is a first-hand eyewitness of the grab which the politicians made for the Justice department one month after Harry Truman came into office. At that time Jim was assistant to the attorney general, the No. 2 spot in the Justice department, and was doing an A-1 job.

His chief, another Philadelphian, was Francis Biddle, a straight-laced Pennsylvania blue-blood who gave the Justice department an honest and forthright administration during the Biddle administration. McGranery and Truman were an effective, efficient team.

McGRANERY ON THE SPOT

Shortly after Vice-President Truman became President of the United States, however, the politicians around him cast hungry eyes on the Justice department. They decided Biddle would have to go.

But Biddle embarrassed Truman by going down to the White House, telling him he quite understood that a new president would want to have his own attorney general, reminding him that he had already submitted his resignation, and pointedly asked who his successor was going to be.

His successor, Truman said, would be Tom Clark.

At this Biddle almost dropped dead. He had been on the verge of firing Tom Clark as chief of his personal division. "Don't take my word for it," he told the President, "call in your friend Jim McGranery and ask him what he thinks of Clark."

McGranery did go down to the White House. But Jim is smart. He did not make a full report.

Shortly thereafter, his new boss, the man whom he did not criticize to Truman, recommended him for appointment as a federal judge in Philadelphia.

UNKNOWN FACTOR

The new attorney general began his political life as a refreshing new congressman during the early days of the New Deal, shocked Republican leaders to rock-ribbed Philadelphia by voting for labor.

GEESSE HOME AT LAKE

Two wild Canadian geese which made their home on Whitford lake in the Holly recreation area last summer have again ended their northern migration here.

civil rights, public housing and other Roosevelt policies.

McGranery has saved his money, invented it wisely, now is moderately well-to-do. He doesn't have to worry about filling out questionnaires or a probe of his private life.

His wife, incidentally, is quite able to buy her own mink coat from her own legal fees. She has been a successful practicing attorney.
