

You can save as much as half the cost of fence posts by using less sweet after it is frozen in a post preservative, say Michigan State College foresters.

Ice cream mixture will taste less sweet after it is frozen in your hand-turned freezer, so add sugar accordingly.

DEATH CERTIFICATE NOT REQUIRED AT RENDERING PLANTS

The Michigan Department of Agriculture has notified rendering plants that certificates issued by veterinarians showing the cause of death of animals will no longer be required to accompany the bodies of dead animals being taken to rendering plants.

An order requiring such certificates, issued to rendering plants when the first case of anthrax was diagnosed in Michigan, has been rescinded by Charles Figy, director of the Department of Agriculture, because of the decrease in the number of anthrax cases. The last case of anthrax was reported to the department on May 21, 1952.

Rendering plants have been instructed not to remove the bodies of any animals from farms under quarantine because of anthrax, nor to pick up any other animal that may be suspected of having died of anthrax.

There have been 31 farms in Michigan on which anthrax has been diagnosed. The farms were located in 17 counties, all in the southern part of Michigan. All but four farms have been released from quarantine.

Racoons Specialize In Nocturnal Picnics

This is the season for racoon picnics.

The woodland comedians obligingly leave parks and recreation areas to people during daylight hours. But after dark they cavort and rattle cans, tip things over and scatter papers.

The nightly revels have been particularly gay at the D. H. Day state park and at Yankee Springs recreation area, according to conservation department park managers.

Language is not only the vehicle of thought, it is a great and sufficient instrument in thinking.

The Grist Mill

There are two main types of smut which affect winter wheat in Michigan; smut (stinking) smut and loose smut. These are fungus diseases with bulbs or masses of spores forming on the head of the wheat plant in place of wheat kernels.

Bunt is not readily recognized until the plants are fully developed. Infected heads are abnormal in size or shape with smut balls replacing the wheat kernels. Upon threshing, the smut balls break apart and the spores are spread to healthy kernels. They adhere to the kernels and are planted with them.

Germinating at the same time to infect the seedling plants. As the spores of bunt are carried on the outside of the kernel they can be destroyed and the disease controlled by seed treatment with formaldehyde or the more common organic mercury dust and liquid treatments such as Ceresan M.

Loose smut differs from bunt in that the fungus produces the spores at flowering time. The spores are blown to the flower parts of healthy heads where they germinate and establish the infection inside the developing kernels of wheat. The infected kernels appear normal and germinate like healthy kernels. The disease is not evident until heading time when black spore masses replace the wheat kernels in the head. To the average farmer the appearance of the disease is rather disconcerting. What may appear to be ten per cent infection by observation may be one per cent by actual count. As loose smut is carried within the seed, chemical seed treatment methods do not offer means of control. Breeding for resistance seems to be the most practical means of control and much progress has been made.

Regardless of the method source one can find an occasional head of loose smut in fields of wheat. On the average, however, there will be less loose smut in fields planted to certified seed than when ordinary seed is used.

Harness Horses To Be "Finger-Printed"

Horses, as well as human beings, can be "finger-printed".

If that's news to you, don't develop an inferiority complex because the drivers at Northville Downs weren't all "hep" to that fact until this season.

Furthermore, soon all the horses at Northville Downs actually will be "finger-printed" as a result of the announcement by the United States Trotting Association of the adoption of a fool-proof system of identifying harness horses.

The USTA has embarked on a program that will result in the "chestnuts" or "night eyes" of every harness horse in the country being photographed.

The "chestnuts" are horny growths located on the inside of each leg and are as effective as fingerprints in providing positive identification. No two are ever alike.

The USTA also will photograph front and side views of every horse and will note for permanent record distinguishing characteristics such as scars, blemishes, imperfections of conformation, etc. Adoption of the new system will protect the public by rendering it impossible for a horse to be "ringed" once his "fingerprints" are on file with the USTA. However, casual track officials point out that instances of "ringing" are rare indeed — they discover one in about every ten years.

Four Baby Mink Get Free 25 Mile Ride

Richard Skiera, Robert B. Skiera and Edward Rakczynski of Brethren unknowingly gave a 25-mile free ride to four baby mink. On dumping a load of pulpwood into a pond at a Filler City plant, they saw four mink hastily leave a hole in one of the pulp bolts. Conservation officer Willis Copeland is finding a new home for the mink.

Sincerity is to speak as we think, to do as we pretend and profess to perform what we promise, and really to be what we would seem and appear to be.

UNEXPECTED COMPANY NO PROBLEM HERE

This wise housewife is prepared for such emergencies. Her International Harvester seven-cubic-foot freezer, known as Model 70, is stocked with 245 pounds of frozen foods! It has more than 17½ square feet of sub-zero fast freezing surface. A steel wire basket keeps the foods she wants handiest near the top of this new kitchen-size freezer.

INCINERATOR or DISPOSER

Frees you from garbage problems!

Presenting the two most modern methods of ending the garbage nuisance. . .

Own an electric incinerator and banish garbage forever. Just drop in food scraps and burnable trash. No work—no worry—no watching. The handfuls of ashes that are left are fine plant food.

Or, with a sink disposer, you rinse food scraps right down the drain. There's no fear of clogging. Actually cleanses plumbing, as food particles and small bones are crushed and washed away.

Order one of these wonderful household helpers today from your plumber or electric appliance dealer.
