ROLLING DOWN THE RIVER

By Bob Kettler

It's a sort of a hot day and we're sitting around this establishment, which we hope you remember is designed for the sale and service of Studebakers. About the only thing that is a full glass of lemonade or a swim in the lake, when in walks an oldish sort of a guy. This fellow has the temerity to top off a Studebaker and on top of that, wants to sell US something.

"Insurance," says he, "which is something mighty useful in your old age, besides which, read that last column of yours and you may not have as much margin as you think. This fellow has the temerity to top off a Studebaker and on top of that, wants to sell US something."

"Insurance," says he, "which is something mighty useful in your old age, besides which, read that last column of yours and you may not have as much margin as you think. This fellow has the temerity to top off a Studebaker and on top of that, wants to sell US something."

Of course we'll be the first to admit that owning a brand new '52 Studebaker will not put you in the high income brackets, but the wonderful economy of the car will make it much easier to pay whatever taxes you may have cluttering up the place. Then too, if you've never driven this amazing V-8 Commander of ours, you'll want to make all possible haste to do so. Such a thrill shouldn't be delayed too long, so drop around. We'll be glad to give you a demonstration.

A lug we know, recently back from his vacation, dropped around to tell us of a small town in which he spent the night. Having nothing to do, he tried to go to the movies, a bowling alley and even a pool room, only to discover the town had no such amusement places. "What," he asks the hotel clerk, "do you do for amusement?"

"Oh, we get by," says the town constable, who was sitting in the only easy chair. "Right now we drop in at the drug store. They've got a college freshman home for the summer."

Just in case you happen to be going on your vacation in the very near future, we urgently request that you get that car of yours in for a bit of motor-tuning up, lubrication and a new oil change. It's most important that your car give satisfactory service at all times when on the road, and is most advisable to take care of it before, not during, the trip.

That's that, but a lady tells us her husband has quit smoking. "He'd never have made it," she says, "except for a strong will-power... mine."

Yours,
