Squash Raisers Warned Of Worm Peril To Crop

Many squash growers or would-be squash growers are disappointed when the squash vine wilts and ed, reports Willard E. Boserman, assistant county agricultural agent.

The trouble lies in a little worm inside the vine. A moth lays its eggs on the vine from the ground surface out to about 18 inches. These eggs hatch in seven to ten days, the larva then begins to chew its way into the vine and works its way toward the tip. This kills the vine in a good many cases.

It is important to get an insecticide on when the eggs hatch. Begin spraying when the vines start to run. Use three pounds of 5% or three and three-fourths pounds of 1% rotenone per 100 gallons of water.

If dust is used, use three-fourths of 1% dust.

ROLLING DOWN THE RIVER

By Bob Kettler

Had we enough sense to go home this hottest sort of a day, everything would have been okay. But no, we've got to stick around this Studebaker Emporium of ours, because for all we know, YOU might drop in and we certainly want to be around on such an occasion. So while we wait, in walks some lug and it isn't you at all, but only a joker that wants to get in out of the sun for a while. Before he goes, he tells us a tongue twister that we've heard a long time ago. He tells it again and now we can't get the darned thing out of our mind. We'll tell it to you, because it's your fault. Had you come in it would never have been around to plague us:

"Moses supposes his toeses are roses, but Moses supposes erroneously, his toeses aren't roses, as Moses supposes his toeses to be." ... read it again and we'll bet you're stuck with it, too.

Well, that's the way things go and had you dropped in, we could have discussed the lovely new '52 Studebaker. There's really no tongue-twisting in beautiful, fast, rugged, economical and all other such words that go into making a perfect description of the Studebaker V-8 Commander or the six-cylinder Champion. You'll never truly appreciate the sterling qualities of this car of ours until you've driven it yourself. Come in for a demonstration!

We read in the papers where two freight trains collide head-on and we're reminded of the engineer who got up one morning with the odds against him. His electric razor refused to work and while he was searching for a new blade for the old reliable the toast burned, the coffee boiled too long. On the way to work he had a flat tire and by the time that was fixed, he was late indeed. Getting his train under way, he started to make up lost time. Taking a curve at maximum speed, he discovered another train headed right at him. Turning to his fireman in disgust he moaned, "Just another day when, no matter what I try to do, everything seems to go wrong."

You've got a vacation coming and plenty of summer weeks ahead. If you don't get some new grease and oil in that car of yours, plenty can go wrong with you, too. We suggest that you hurry right in, have our men give it a thorough lubrication and a most expert tune-up. You will be most exceedingly glad you did in the summer months ahead.

That's that, but we hear of a fellow that went to see his wife about his wife. Seems the lady develops an inferiority complex and the husband wanted a device on how to keep her that way.

Yours,
BOB KETTLER
