THE MICHIGAN MIRROR

and rural areas because of the democratic hand-shaking, hand-dancing ways, who appeared before the voters as a Democrat — not as a union candidate.

The key to the Michigan CIO success was Wayne County, which has 37% of the state's population. By capturing Wayne County alone, the PAC was able to get control of the Michigan state convention. This was not possible in Ohio, a state of many large industrial centers. Where the Ohio labor leaders were out in the open and incurred resentment of many voters, the Michigan CIO operated behind the scenes, hidden from public view and hence less vulnerable to criticism.

These facts, as vouched for by Miss Calkins, are of pertinent interest to Michigan voters this fall for three good reasons.

First, the Michigan CIO is now attempting to extend its influence by getting control of the State Legislature. Reapportionment of the legislature has been handed to date on a basis of geographical representation in the Senate and population representation in the House. This practice is also followed at Washington in election of Senators and Representatives. The Michigan CIO wants to change this by giving a handful of counties a majority control of the legislature through election of senators and representatives. The scheme is known as Amendment No. 2.

Second, the Michigan CIO would take away the following congressmen through such a reapportionment: One each from the Upper Peninsula, North Michigan above the Muskegon — Bay City area, and Western Michigan, west of about US-27. The southeastern Michigan industrial area, centering around Detroit, would have 12 Congressmen instead of nine as at present.

Third, re-election of Governor G. Mennen Williams will assure a continuation of the statelets at Lansing whereby the average legislative revenue bill, other than a state corporation profits tax, is automatically assured of a governor's veto.

Like all elections, however, the November 4 election is complicated by having many issues, some relevant and some not. Political observers at Lansing are crossing their fingers on the November 4 outcome in Michigan. The election is just that close. Not for a generation have the odds been so even five days before the election. And not in that time has Michigan been so vital to the hopes of both parties.

Michigan has enjoyed the experience of being a pivotal Presidential state.

At least the crowds who turned out to greet Eisenhower in three appearances here, for two formal speeches and his successful whistlestop trip cross-state; who heard him kick-off his campaign at Detroit and make a propeller-stop trip; and who heard President Truman make his typical "give-em-ell-arry" talks here — the audiences seemed to be enjoying themselves tremendously.

Their final reaction — how they'll vote Tuesday — is something the voters are still keeping to themselves.

In the meanwhile, the Michigan CIO will have its greatest test at the ballot box. The stakes are great.

CHILDS MAKES SAFETY PLEA FOR HALLOWE'EN

As thousands of boys and girls throughout Michigan prepare to make another Halloween night "trick or treat" venture, State Police Commissioner Joseph A. Childs appeals to motorists to be on the lookout for children.

"The hazard of limited visibility," said Childs, "is emphasized when children are dressed in dark costumes. And, of course, their own vision is lessened when they are wearing masks."

"Motorists should expect the unexpected at all times and watch carefully for children darting across streets."

"Parents should warn children of the added hazards of crossing streets and highways after dark. Streets should be crossed only at intersections and never between."

"Small children should not be allowed to go out alone. Some older person should accompany them."

"Make Halloween night a happy one for the boys and girls — and adults too — by taking precautions to avoid traffic tragedies. Watch out for kids."

Troop No. 2 attended the Olsen and Johnson Skating Vanities on opening night at the Olympia. We enjoyed it a lot and had a barrel of laughs. Five of the girls' mothers attended and we would like to thank all who helped with transportation: Mrs. Butler, Mrs. Marie Melvin, Mr. Bennett, Mr. Hawley and Mr. Price. The Troop is planning a nature hike and a Court of Awards.

The girls brought their used comic books, children's story books and American Girl magazines to their leaders' home and we had them presented to the children's hospital by Mrs. Marshall Wing, who is employed there.

Clarenceville Girl Scouts Association November meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Charlotte Rice, 21339 Orchard Lake Road, on November 3 at 8:00 p.m.
