ROLLING DOWN THE RIVER

We sort of like this season of the year. The beauty of turning leaves, the crisp cool mornings, the rest for living that goes with such surroundings, do things to us.

We sort of like this season of the year. The beauty of turning leaves, the crisp cool mornings, the rest for living that goes with such surroundings, do things to us.

Now quite a few of you good folk have been aiming in my direction ever since that fine display of ours has been available. We're going to keep it around for another week, but we hope that those of you who haven't seen our old-time Blacksmith shop, the covered wagon, the ancient stage coach and other museum pieces get over to our sales room as rapidly as possible.

There are occasions when we listen to the radio or watch television and we suspect that you do the same. It has been quite cluttered of late with politicians telling us the country was going this way or that, depending whether he was speaking for or against. Been a lot of promises too, that sounded most beautiful. An independent friend of ours says that believing in promises is too much like building a house of cards in hopes of holding it together with a coat of heavy paint.

The frost on the car and the depths of the thermometer these mornings remind us that fall is really here and that your car needs must acquire a bit of anti-freeze, a shot of winter grease and oils and a motor check-up. It's much more fun driving a car that starts instantly and it saves wear and tear on the boys in the shop. It's really not their fault you forget to come in to have the winter check-up. In fact they've been hoping you'd get around to it much sooner. They want to keep you happy and if you should happen to visit them as often as necessary for a free check-up, it makes it much easier for them to keep a grocery or two in the house.

That's that, but the fellow who says the man of today is afraid to take a chance, hasn't done any Sunday driving on a 3-lane highway.

Yours, BOB KETTLER
