State Game Men Look Anxiously To Results Of 1953 Deer Season

Michigan game hen beaved a lime it could mean irres and the provision of the state in the special three-day any deer season and skinmed some fair the state's deep herd in the northern lower petinsula. Before that season stated, those game men had hoped for a lot of things — good weather, many hunters, a heavy kill — and they were fortunate enough to witness at the roughly successful special season.

pand off; this year, if they decree fortunate enough to witness a thoroughly successful special season. It was a long step forward, and now long needed.

But it was only the first step and now Michigan hunters are to have another special season, December 1, when any deer — buck, doe or fawn — will be legal in the lower pentisual north of $M$-5.

Game men don't expect, nor do they want, so heavy a kill as last year. Their requist for a one-day season this full, instead of three days as last full, is adequate testimony to this.

But they do want to remove the extra animals, so in the coming winter there, will be enough not until food in the woods for those that remain as breeding stock for next year's hered.

This, essentially is the policy of the department under deer herd management:

ducing growths on the winter range.
What will happen in the north-ern lower peninsula on December 1 is anybody's guess. A bad storm could stop hunters cold and slow down the management program. Followed by a hird winter, this could spell starvition for some deer in the herd. At the same
