This material also had to be submitted to designers to obtain construction estimates. After the type of system was selected, it was necessary for the designer, to agree to provide a 3 spear term security bond equal to the cost of the construction. There are still a large number of important items to be completed before the new plant is in actual operation. These items include: completion of design and securing of, estimates, sale of the formation of the plant and finally instructional period for the operator.
