Mrs. Charles E. Heliker.

On Tuesday, November 3, 1908, the angel of death bore the Master's summons of surcease from pain and sorrow to the soul of Mrs. Charles E. Heliker and her spirit was gently wafted on the wings of peace to the bourne where eternal love and purity abide. For many months Mrs. Heliker had suffered with uncomplaining fortitude and cheerful patience the ravages of disease pronounced incurable and never during the long, dreary, weary days, when life was slowly ebbing, did she murmur against the decree or evince ought but willingness to obey with humility her Father's call.

Cora E. VanAlstyne was born in Farmington, Oakland county, Mich., January 29, 1867. She was the last remaining child of William and Hannah VanAlstyne, two sisters and a brother preceding her in death. When five years of age, her parents moved to Williams-ton, Ingham county, Mich., where she was educated, and taught school four years, until her marriage to Charles E. Heliker of Farmington. Mrs. Heliker was always an active, self sacrificing helper in church and allied works for the good of humanity. About twelve years ago she organized the East Farmington Cemetery association, and, with the exception of three years, was its secretary during that time. When the North Farmington Auxiliary was organized in 1904, she was chosen president and held that office at the time of her death. She was an ever-willing and faithful worker in these societies till ill-health precluded further participation in loving deeds of kindly thoughtfulness. Mrs. Heliker leaves to mourn their loss her husband and parents.

The funeral services were held at the home in Farmington Friday, November 6, 1908, there being a large gathering of relatives and friends to pay the last sad tribute of love and respect. The Rev. Collins delivered a touching address upon the beautiful character of the deceased, dwelling earnestly and eloquently on the sweet disposition which was evidenced throughout the months of suffering and maintained with unabated cheerfulness to the last. The floral offerings were many and beautiful. The interment was in the peaceful rural cemetery at East Farmington, which the deceased had done so much to beautify.

O'er the grave of Cora Heliker the snow will softly fall, covering it with a mantle of purity, flowers will bloom and laden the air with fragrance and birds carol joyously in the glad summer time, but more lasting, more beautiful than these will be the memory of the sweet disposition ever manifested by her who sleeps so calmly there.

WHY NOT?

"This," said the teacher to her class of small arithmeticians, "is a unit." She held up a pencil. "This book is a unit, too," said she. "And these are units." And she showed them a ruler, a flower and an apple. Then she peeled the apple, and, holding up the peel, said: "Now, children, what is this?" Silence.

"Come, you know what it is," urged. Little Bill's hand went up slowly. "Well, William?" said the teacher. "Pleathe, na'an, the skin of a nut."—Harper's Weekly.

BERNARD SHAW'S EGOTISM.

Some time ago Mr. Stead in London wanted to gather about him some of the brains of Europe and then make a trip around the world in the interests of everlasting peace. He asked G. Bernard Shaw to be one of the party, which invitation most men would have thought a compliment, but Mr. Shaw said: "My dear Stead, I have far more work to do than kings and queens, but if you will bring a collection of rulers to my house in Adelphi Terrace I should be very glad to talk to them any morning."

ONLY LACK OF FACILITIES.

Clara's aunt took her out for a visit to Niagara Falls. After viewing the great waterfall for some time, and the little girl failing to make any remarks, aunt tried to draw some expression from her as to what she thought of the spectacle. Finally she said: "Oh, yes, I s'pose so; but I fink our creek at home could do it if it had a place."—Woman's Home Companion.

THE STEPMOTHER.

"You are my world!" the young man cried passionately. "And you my sun. You know, Algie—" Flo Flottis fitted a fresh cigarette in the long tube of meerschaum and amber.
 "You know, I promised to marry your governor last night!"

200,000 DOSES.

A little drug store on Avenue A, New York, has been exhibiting in its window a number of old scrap books in which are pasted prescriptions yellow with age. These date back to the firm's establishment. A printed sign in the window said: "400,000 filled correctly. Why not bring your prescriptions to us?"
