Once Again . . .

members of the Township Board have expressed the opinion at a public meeting that a building code should be adopted. A similar expression was made over a year ago and yet no action has been taken to date.

In the meantime a number of situations have arisen which have not only caused considerable concern among the property owners, but has resulted in some rather stormy sessions before the Township Board. These situations would not have developed had the people been protected through the existence of a building code. Farmington Township stands practically alone and unguarded among its neighbors. Nearly every city and township in this section of the State has a functioning building code. With the tremendous growth taking place, Farmington Township as much as another needs this protection.

Several years ago the voters of the township turned down a proposed building code. The reasons for this action were varied, but the principal cause seemed to center around the fact that a zoning ordinance should come first. Since that time the voters have adopted zoning and it is serving a valuable purpose. Many of the anticipated fears regarding this protective instrument have been proved to be unfounded. We believe that the people of Farmington Township are interested in some additional insurance. In fact, many of them have said so in private and before the Board.

The Township Board can and should initiate the action. They have many successful codes to draw from. Codes that have been proved by use in townships all around us. They have an excellent opportunity to enact a piece of progressive legislation which will be of benefit to the entire community. But time is becoming increasingly important. If the people are to have the protection they need, action must be taken now. It isn't much comfort to take out insurance after the storm has blown the house down.

At A Giant Celebration . . .

last week officials and solicitors of the Detroit Torch Drive happily marked the successful conclusion of the 1954 campaign. They have exceeded by thousands of dollars the amazing $13,250,000 quota.

They all deserve a great deal of credit for the outstanding achievement in the building of a better Detroit. It is interesting, however, to compare these results with the equally conscientious efforts of the Farmington United Fund and Community Chest organization. While the Detroit campaign has shot over the top by many thousands of dollars, Farmington is still far from its necessary goal.

A great many Farmington residents helped materially in the success of the Detroit campaign. This is as it should be, and they are to be congratulated for their generosity. Many of them did not forget their home community, either. They did not forget the local agencies that depend upon Farmington alone for their support.

But unfortunately, some other Farmington residents apparently did forget. The final result is not known as yet . . . but it doesn't look like there will be any victory celebration.

The Expected . . .

has happened, namely Joseph McCarthy has blasted individually and collectively, the members of the special committee which has recommended censure of the Senator from Wisconsin.

McCarthy's script follows an equally expected pattern with the main theme centering around the charge that the committee is "an unwitting handmaiden of the Communist party." The Senator has always been quick to tab his critics as either Red sympathizers or soft toward Communists. It is a handy diversionary tool which has no foundation in record or fact.

No one has any quarrel with McCarthy in his basic desire to rid the country of Communists. But there is considerable concern over the methods and techniques used by the Senator. This is an important line of demarcation which McCarthy does not choose to recognize. The question is not Communism, but rather McCarthy. Other leaders have done an equally effective job in fighting Communism and they have done it without insult and fanfare.

We can expect the expected from McCarthy . . . and we're getting it!

Breaking in the New Shoes

LOOKING AHEAD
By GEORGE S. BENSON
President - Hastings College
Stacy, Arkansas

Washington, D. C. — On an early evening stroll through the retail shopping district of Washington, I counted 47 shoe stores or shoe departments, in department stores and apparel shops. About the average for an American city the size of Washington. On display were thousands of shoes of all sizes, priced from $2.99 to $34.50. In the shelves beyond the displays were tens of thousands of shoes. I had not come to Washington to look at shoes. My purpose was to interview a number of Cabinet members and departmental heads.

But I had also spent some time at the State Department and "on the hill" with staff members are usually some of the Congressional committee members. My sudden interest in shoes developed after I had been given some authentic information, from a shoe situation in Communist Hungary. Shoes for Hungary's millions are made in government-operated cooperatives, as are made in Communist countries. Communist countries operate a Socialist economic system combining State ownership of industry, cooperative manufacturing and marketing and collective farming. Under it, the average citizen lives in relative poverty. But the facts from being heard about the shoe situation in Communist Hungary are usually colored in propaganda.

The utter inefficiency of politically-operated cooperatives is dramatized in a restrained but pointed dispatch which appeared recently in the Budapest newspaper, "Magyar Nemzet." It tells of a Budapest resident's frustration in trying to purchase a pair of shoes last March. "He pointed to a shoe in the display window and said: 'That is the kind I want.' The following is the reply he was given: 'First of all, we must have a serial number at the most you and you will have to wait your turn.'"

The customer modestly took the serial number to wait his turn. With it he came back a month later, on April 27, 1954, and ordered a pair of shoes. They measured his feet and after he made an advance payment, they told him: "The shoes in first-class quality will be ready by the end of the month." Yes, the shoes were later were ready. Witnesses told me that the shoes were very nice. They simply sparkled. There was only one trouble with them. They were so small they would not go on his feet.

"If you wish," said the salesman, "we shall give you back your deposit. Or, in a short time you will make you another pair. In a short time, hardly more than six days, they took his measurements again. They also said that in following the policy of your greater attention to the needs of workers, they could make the shoes in slightly less than two weeks. Two weeks passed. So informed him that an unexpected turn of events prevented the shoes from being delivered.

"The shoes sorry to say, got lost. But we'll willingly give you back your deposit." "I don't want the deposit, I want shoes!" the customer exclaimed. The salesman gave another promise, this time to have the shoes ready by July 3. Finally the shoes were ready (by mid-July). . . . But they were a little uncomfortable. There were wrinkles on the toe and the soles were not symmetrical with the sides of the shoes. . . . This is the way T. B., a resident of Budapest, obtained a pair of shoes after 17 weeks of great pains. This is not right!"
