FARMINGTON SCHOOL DISTRICT
BOARD OF EDUCATION

PAID POLITICAL ADV.

'For Kids' -- Gary Lichtman

"Letting the people know what is going on" is the main thrust of the campaign to "return Gary Lichtman to the Farmington Board of Education."

Lichtman was vice president of the board when he resigned in the middle of a term in 1971. He is currently president of the Oakland County Intermediate Board of Education; president of the Farmington Area Advisory Council; president of the Woodcreek Parent Assn., a member of Rotary and the Camelot Courts Homeowners Assn.

He says he has attended every school board meeting for five years, and has an "intense, compelling interest in education."
His resignation came because "I didn't think it was benefiting the board to continue. I can see now it didn't do any good."
He describes himself as a former "maverick" candidate and quit when "it became a power thing. I don't think politics has any place on the board."

Now he has "more experience." Pointing primarily to his work on the intermediate board, Lichtman feels he has gained the ability "to be a leader -- to compromise."

"Things aren't accomplished by hitting people over the head."
He is critical of the way the school board has been run in the past, mainly in the area of conduct of the business -- particularly in holding closed meetings. Lichtman feels the credibility of the district suffered in the wake of a lost millage, and the firing of the superintendent. "I think credibility could be restored by letting the people know what's going on."

He added he would decline to attend secret meetings of the board, adding "if board members do what they have said they will do, we will have no difficulty at all."
He feels the board's role should be that of a "lay advisory board."
"I feel I have an understanding of the processes of education, but I'm not a professional," he said.

He describes the program as "adequate." But we must constantly monitor it; we must teach our children about the society in which we will live."
"We have to be willing to listen; and I don't think the present board has created that kind of atmosphere," he added.

Dean Lists 5 Students

FARMINGTON
Five Farmington students at Michigan Technological University earned places on the dean's list for the winter quarter by achieving a grade point average of 3.5 or higher from a possible four points.

Nancy J. Scott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Iain M. Scott of 36331 Quakerdown, completed a straight-A average. She is a sophomore majoring in medical technology.

Others on the honors list are Timothy M. Jarratt, Deborah A. Julien, Pamela J. Kiebusch and Michael G. Mansfield.

Jarratt, a business administration major, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William R. Jarratt of 29665 Fernhill Drive. He is a sophomore.

Miss Julien, also a sophomore, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Julien of 32361 Red Clover. She is a medical technology major.

Miss Kiebusch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William G. Kiebusch of 21033 Birchwood, is a sophomore majoring in medical technology.

Mansfield, a freshman, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald L. Mansfield of 2206 Frederick. He is majoring in civil engineering.

'I'm Conservative' Says Carl Licht

FARMINGTON
"I'm not for change for change's sake," Carl E. Licht said.

Licht, who lives at 26291 Pillsbury Drive, is owner and president of Greenwood Welding, Inc. A chemical engineering graduate from the University of Michigan, he is president of the Easter Seal campaign for Wayne County and president of the River Rouge Rotary.

He said he originally became interested in the local schools during the controversy over the family life education program several years ago, and still has reservations about the program.

"I could be looked at a little further," he said.
"There are a lot of parents still objecting, there is some kind of stigma on the child who is pulled out of the class...I'm for basic biological things being taught."
"They talk about progress, but educators keep changing -- they jump from one thing to another."
"You shouldn't experiment with the minds of young people."

Licht said he ran because "they needed balance on the slate. My philosophy is of a conservative nature."

"Right now, there is too much politics -- the board isn't really talking about issues."
"You can argue these things out in study sessions when not so many people come."

He is critical of the board's stand on busing, saying "I hate to see us stand by -- the board should take a stand."

He was not clear on what form this stand should be, but advocated "something like Birmingham," which joined in the legal fight as a defendant.

Farmington has been contributing money to the defense fund, but has not actively on the advice of school attorney Robert Kelly.

He was also critical of the "media centers."
"This business of change... putting several classes in one room, we were trying to get class sizes smaller."
Summarizing, he said.

Carl Licht

"The school board has various problems; they should be studied, talked about, and then attacked. There are no pre-determined solutions."
"I know it's a big job, a lot of work, but I am willing to try it."

MSU Quotas Successful

EAST LANSING
Enrollment quotas in Michigan State University's College of Education are doing the job they were designed to do -- limiting enrollment to the number of students the faculty can adequately handle.

The quotas were instituted just over a year ago, limiting elementary education majors to 100 and secondary education majors to 160 each of seniors and juniors.

The limits were misinterpreted by some as a response to the current tight job market for teachers. However, College of Education spokesmen have been saying for some time that its graduates can find jobs if they're willing to go where the jobs are.
