

HOT SUMMER WEATHER NO INDICATION OF COLD WINTER, SAYS METEOROLOGIST

Old wives' tales to the contrary, you just can't predict a cold winter coming up because of our hot summer, says a University of Michigan meteorologist.

So says A. Nelson Dingle, research associate in the University of Michigan's Engineering Research Institute, who looks on summer and winter as separate entities significantly separated by the fall season during which anything can happen atmospherically, and usually he explains this by pointing out that although there may be some continuity in weather pattern during the summer, a time of relatively few storms, changes in air temperature and other atmospheric gyrations make fall a turbulent period, disrupting what little order there might have been in the pattern.

Spring is the same kind of unpredictable season with a rapidly warming atmosphere making its weather changeable, he says.

"For some strange reason people expect the atmosphere to be a simple thing producing weather that follows logically day after day. Dingle states, 'but it is actually highly complex, huge, and influenced by many forces - some of which we don't even know about.'"

Weather prediction beyond a few days is a pretty risky business, he declares, since "weather persistence," as it is called, can't be counted on as a guide for longer than this period.

A popular topic for speculation when the mercury sits above 90 is the general warming trend evidenced all over the world in the past few years. There are several possible reasons advanced for continuance of this, Dingle declares, and cites two theories.

One is based on the increasing amount of carbon dioxide in the air caused by man's burning of fossil fuels like oil and coal, and the other rests on the idea that as the glacial areas in the northern hemisphere decrease there is less of a source for cold air, and refrigerating capacities decrease.

NEW X-RAY BUS WILL BE SEEN IN STATE SOON

A Christmas Seal sponsored x-ray unit carrying the emblem of the Michigan Tuberculosis Association will soon be making its appearance on Michigan's highways as the result of action taken at the quarterly meeting of the MTA board of trustees.

Approved by a unanimous vote, the chest x-ray unit will be used to demonstrate the value of prompt follow-up work following an x-ray or tuberculin testing survey.

Health authorities agree that the value of mass chest x-ray surveys is lost unless prompt, thorough and complete follow-up is undertaken. This includes x-raying all persons with suspicious findings on screening films, all persons who react to the tuberculin skin test, and all contacts of persons diagnosed to have active tuberculosis, among others.

The need for Christmas Seal funds to be used for an x-ray unit has arisen because of the failure of Michigan's legislature to provide sufficient funds for the state health department to conduct an adequate program of TB case-finding, board members brought out.

Other reasons for providing the service are that the mobile units of the state health department take small, screening films, which are not acceptable for diagnosing TB and other chest ailments.
