When he realized what was happening, he came out with a statement denying everything.
Paul Weber, Williams' pressecretary, was credited with the now-familiar statement he said he would hold in readiness if Williams ever again were trapped into a statement embarrassing to himself or the Democrats:

The rhubarb which developed when he was invited to speak at a segregated political gathering in the south was embarrassing to a governor whose state was just giving birth to FPC. Organization of a group of CIO workers in Washlenaw County as a "Republican Labor Organiza-tion" is a delicate subject. Now the question remains: What will Williams do in 1956? Sat., 10 - 5 Sun. 1 - 4 Closed Wednesday will Williams do in 1958?

The experts say that his refusal to go into the south and appease the militant segregationists burt his chances on a national scale and they are looking for him to run for a fifth term as governor. Some are going a step farther: that Williams will try for another term, then go against Senator Potter in 1958.

Williams isn't talking, waiting for the shifting political winds to change again.

Republicans have charged that state officials are holding back in-formation from the legislature so that Williams can announce it with all the fanfare of his office.

Williams was elected to his fourth term, eight years as Demo-cratic governor in a Republican state.
