several angles that this promotion has not been as successful as hoped. Unless this idea can be sold to the people of Farm-ington, something is going to have to give, and it will probably be the degree of service being rendered. This is extremely unfortunate, since all of the agen-cies involved are providing services which are of major importance to the community. We sincerely hope that the picture will brighten considerably in the next few weeks. Although the campaign is officially over, a number of reports are yet to come in. It would be wonderful if all the adult population of America today; could have access to and would read the famous old McGuffey's Eclecit: Readers, which were the dominant elementary school text. the old McGuffey stoling lessons ing, and the school text is books in America for almost a cer-tury, beginning in 1836. Many of the old McGuffey stoling lessons ing, and the school text is an eavy series of school readers now being published by the Amer-ican Book Company. The appearance of the new Mc-Guffey series prompted me to browse through my own cherished set of the original McGuffey Read-ers received as a glit some years ago. Their stories are wonderful — the best from the pen of such writers as Hawhorne, Whitton-Longfelow, Ak Join Jong Dikems, Thackery, etc. The readers of this column will agree, I'm sure, that the moral of "The Venomous Worm," from McGuffey's old Fifth meader, has application today. Here it is. "Who had not heard of the rat-

Worm," from McGuffey's old Fifth Reader, has application today. "Who had not heard of the rat-tlesnake or copperhead? An un-expected sight of either of these reptiles will make anybody re-coil; but there is a species of worm found in various parts of this country, which conveys a poi-son of a nature so deadly that, compared with it, even the venom of the rattlesnake is harmless. To guard our readers against this foe of human kind is the object of this lesson.
