Offers Tips On Preventing Accidental Burns In Home

During the months of more congested indoor living, the Institute for Safer Living of the American Mutual Liability Insurance Company warns that all parents with young children should be careful of burns from the contents of overturned pans of soup, stews, hot coffee and tea.

Boiling water, a household necessity, is a constant source of child burn.

The Institute recommends the following protective measures to help guard children against burns. Keep children out of the kitchen when cooking or handling hot liquids; place coffee, tea pots, cups and saucers well in on the table; turn pot and pan handles inward from the edge of the stove.

FARMINGTON'S NEWEST super market officially opened its doors on Tuesday. The store employs 150 persons and is managed by Gerry Dunn. Special features include an Awrey

Bakery section as well as packaged meat, dairy and grocery departments. The store also includes the only packaged fruit and vegetable department in the Metropolitan area. The entire parking lot is blacktopped and lighted, and the entrance and exit doors are electrically controlled.

FOREST FIRE LOSSES REPORTED LOW IN STATE THIS YEAR

Michigan established its third best record in forest fire prevention and suppression during 1955, despite extremely hazardous conditions caused by hot, dry weather during the summer and fall months.

Early snowfalls throughout the state have reduced the likelihood of more fires during the remainder of the year.

Some 1,151 fires damaged 7,204 acres of state and private grasslands and forests during the year. The damage total is the third-lowest in state history, bettered only by 1954's record mark of 3,894 acres and the 1951 figure of 4,491 acres.

Fire losses during the past several years have averaged around 7,500 acres per year, a far cry from early years of the century when fires often devastated hundreds of thousands of acres annually.

Credit for Michigan's progress in fire prevention and suppression belongs to "a more fire-conscious public" and improved techniques of fire fighting, according to M. M. Bergman, in charge of the Conservation Department's fire suppression work.

Modern fire fighting methods make use of a variety of implements, including airplanes, fire towers and mechanized equipment. Much of this equipment is perfected and produced at the Department's forest fire experiment station, the only installation of its type in the nation. "An informed public is a major factor in fire prevention," Bergman said. "Our record is a reflection of that public cooperation."

In addition to the importance of safety, fire suppression also is important in timber profits and wildlife habitat.

Sales of timber from public and private forests are increasing annually, bringing a profit to the entire state.

Forests also provide food and a home for wildlife, maintaining a plentiful supply for the state's hunters.

Vandals Stripping Michigan Of Its Natural Greenery

Christmas vandals will soon be happily at work again stripping Michigan of its natural greenery, according to Dr. Marion T. Hall, botanist at Cranbrook Institute of Science, Bloomfield Hills.

"Most people are so ignorant of the Wild Flower Law," says Dr. Hall, "they do not realize they are vandals-by-association when they buy illegally cut Christmas greens and trees."

The Wild Flower Law, adopted by Michigan State Legislature in 1933 and amended in 1941 and 1943, was primarily an act passed to stop abuse of public and private lands by Christmas tree and greenery pickers. Natives of the state, who should know better, ship greens by the barrel to markets all over this country and Europe, says Dr. Hall.

Not content with "picking", however, the vandals yank the greens out by the roots, particularly the club mosses, which are trailing evergreen mosses related to ferns. This upsets the continuing cycle of development because it makes way for weeds which become a breeding place to the insect pests that attack crop plants in the area, Dr. Hall said.

All citizens can avoid being a partner in this destruction. Simply look for official identification tags on all trees or greens purchased at Christmas time, and, of course, never cut trees or greens along the highway or in the woods unless cutting on your own property.

Plan Sale, Exhibit At Cranbrook

Through the fall term, students at Cranbrook Academy of Art anticipate the Christmas Exhibition and Sale of student work which opens this year the evening of Friday, December 2, in the Gallery of Cranbrook Academy of Art. Students in all departments have been working on a varying assortment of unusual gifts. From metalsmithing will come jewelry - pendants, rings, bracelets, earrings and copper bowls and trays; from weaving, scarves and stoles; from silk-screening, many varieties of Christmas cards in gay colors, fashioned in the design studios; from the ceramics department colorful plates, pots, bowls, and ash trays. There will be paintings, done in the regular course of student work, also sculptures in wood, metal and stone.

Wallace Mitchell, head of the Galleries, states that the public is cordially invited to come and look and purchase gifts for the hard-to-please. Also on view are two continuing exhibitions; human interest news photographs from "Friends" Magazine, and dramatic juxtapositions of the ancient and modern from the permanent collection.

Galleries of Cranbrook Academy of Art will be open December 2 through December 11, daily from 2 until 5, except Monday, December 5. They will also be open two evenings, December 2 and 3, from 8 until 10 o'clock.
