is about to happen once again. The Farmington School Board has declared its intent to submit a new bond proposal to the voters in an effort to secure sufficient funds for the construction of additional school buildings.

school buildings.

A mere glance at the ever-increasing enrollment figures is ample proof of the need. It has been obvious for the last several years that the Farmington area is and will continue to be confronted with a school housing problem. How this situation is to be met is one of the big questions facing the community.

met is one of the big questions facing the community.

The securing of proper sites and the construction of adequate school buildings costs money, and a lot of it. This money can be derived only from bond issues levied against local taxpayers or from outside governmental sources. The Enterprise is opposed to the securing of State or Federal aid for this purpose if it can be avoided. We believe that schools are a community responsibility and as such should be financed and operated on the local level, wherever and whenever possible.

This, of course, places the burden of responsibility on the people of the District. Because Farmington is basically a residential area, this burden falls primarily on the individual taxpayer. For many years The Enterprise has advocated greater emphasis on the development of commercial and selected industrial establishments in the area. Some results are beginning to take shape, particularly in the City. This, we believe, is the major answer to our growing problem. It will not only allow the community to take care of its own, but it will greatly reduce the load on the individual taxpayer.

The entire Farmington area will continue to grov regardless of the degree of commercial and industrial development. However, the basic difference will be that we will have the services and facilities so badly that we will have the services and facilities so baner, needed without undue strain on the home owner. Good schools are essential to the character and wellbeing of the community. Farmington can be proud of the progress that it has made thus far, and it can and should plan and prepare for even greater progress.

Considerable Discussion . . .

is now being carried on by the Township Board regarding the possible-establishment of a "Charter Township." We have not had an opportunity as yet to study the proposal in sufficient detail to draw a

On the basis of observation, however, we believe On the basis of observation, nowever, we believe that such a plan may have considerable merit and should be explored carefully and factually. It is obvious that as the Township continues to grow, increased organization of the government must be accomplished. There is a definite need right now for greater delegation of responsibility and further departmentalization of the various functions of administration.

The Enterprise has previously suggested that committees or commissions be created out of the Board for the administration of the various departments such as police, fire, and public buildings. This, we believe, could be done under the present form of government. However, there are many other needed reforms which can not be taken care of under the present et up. present set up.

One of the most important of these is the appoint-One of the most important of these is the appointment of a trained and experienced administrator. The very complex nature of the Township with its many changes and problems requires the full time attention of a qualified administrator. The creation of such an office would not eliminate any of the powers or responsibilities of the elected officials, but it would create a central agency for the administration of Township affairs. We believe that this is exceedingly important for the efficient operation of government.

Whether the creation of a "Charter Township" or some other form of government would best serve the people is yet to be determined. In the meantime, every effort should be expended by the Board to make available information regarding the proposals so that the public will be aware of what is being discussed. This is especially important, since it will be the people's responsibility to make the final decision.

FARMERS IN 20 COUNTIES will get Federal loans to help carry them through the shock of drought last summer.

Oldtimers said it was the worst summer for potatoes in 25 years, and others were worried how they would feed their livestock through the winter.

Farmers first must apply for loans to a county agent, who refers the request to a three-member county committee of farmers, men who know the local situation best. The approved applications are then funneled through Bonine's office in East Lansing, then to the Department of Agriculture in Washington.

Department of Agriculture in Washington. Bonine said the entire process takes ten days to two weeks. Applications also are expected from southwestern Michigan fruit farmers, livestock producers and from the rich potato areas in the northern lower peninsula.
