Polio Cases Down, Health Department Figures Show

Polio should cause less crippling in Michigan this year. More than 2,000,000 doses of polio vaccine have been given to the most susceptible groups, and health officials hope for a marked reduction in paralysis caused by the disease.

Dr. F. S. Leeder, state health department director of disease control, said that this year's record shows that on June 29, Michigan had some 48 new cases of polio reported, against 82 in the same period last year and 119 new cases in 1954.

He said it is too early to tell if the vaccine is going to bring expected reductions in paralytic polio, "but there is every reason to think that it will."

The health department, he said, is continuing to urge parents to have children immunized against the disease. The group eligible for vaccine remains children one through fourteen and pregnant women.

Of the total 31,000,000 donations of blood obtained by Red Cross since February, 1941, some 21,000,000 donations were provided for military and defense and 10,000,000 donations were provided for civilian use.
