ment of clothing. The trail led to New York. McClellan investigators found that Johnny Dio, prominent in some labor union activities, was connected in some of the procurement dealings.

The deeper McClellan's Committee dug, the nastier were the facts and their implications. Later, on the West Coast, other shocking facts were uncovered. The Senate Labor Committee was brought into the picture. The two committees agreed on a full-fledged investigation and set up the "Select" Committee. Senator McClellan, who had demonstrated an uncommon ability to handle investigations and hearings and who had achieved an enviable reputation for fairness, was his colleagues' choice for chairman.

THE CITIZENS STAKE

"Every American citizen has a stake in the work of this committee," Senator McClellan soberly said to me. "Some of the evidence we have suggests an unsavory and dangerous situation in some areas. The very future of our freedom system could be jeopardized."

As I left the Senator's private office, Chief Counsel Kennedy and a group of Oregon people entered. On the desk of the receptionist in the outer office a new batch of telegrams had been opened. I scanned the one on top. It came from a West Coast city heretofore not mentioned in the McClellan Committee hearings. The sender's name and address was signed. The telegram said: "GET OUT HERE AND INVESTIGATE DIRTY WORK IN LOCAL (NAME AND NUMBER GIVEN) ONE MAN BEATEN. I'M NEXT. FBI KNOWS."

The McClellan Committee seems determined to "get out there" on all such summonses, and to bring to the attention of the nation (and local authorities) any racketeering conditions jeopardizing our freedom system. For that we should all be grateful.

The girls went first to the Post Office where they saw how letters come in and are cancelled by machine, where the mail is sorted and put into the slots for different cities and the mail which was to be sent on trains and so on. The girls saw the parcel post packages and the incoming mail being sorted according to zones. The girls also saw their own Bel-Air rack where the district postman sorts their mail, every morning.

Police Chief Joseph DeVriendt then showed the girls the Police station. There the girls saw the jail where the finger printing took place. The girls saw the radio and heard some incoming calls. A test call to a police car was made for them. Captain DeVriendt explained the fire alarm system to the girls and the buttons to be pushed for fires in each area.
