Communist regime and to admit it to the United Nations. Nothing," said Ambassador Tong, could be more disastrous to both the United States and China. There is no neutrality on the great moral issues which confront mankind.

"Ever since God created the universe, man has always been confronted by stern choices between diametrically opposite alternatives. There is heaven and hell. There is good or evil. There is right or wrong. There is love or hate. There is peace or war. There is friendship or hostility. Man is always challenged by these painful decisions. The neutralist is the man who lacks the moral stamina to make a decision and who hunts for a safe and non-committal middle ground, where he can evade a choice between the two extremes. The neutralist attitude is always the attitude of weakness. Usually, it proves to be not neutral at all, but an aid to the worst of the alternatives.

A Moral Decision

"In the present issue of world Communism versus freedom, the neutral position is always a cowardly position. Despite these glaring facts, the drift toward neutralism in some countries of the free world is continuous."

Ambassador Tong said that an examination of the published facts shows that Red China is "an abject Soviet satellite." And he claims that it enjoys a broad base of popular support," he said, "completely overlooks the 20,000,000 corpses in Red China" — killed by the Communists since 1949 for the "so-called crime of opposing the policies of the Communist regime."

The Ambassador cited magazine articles and literature being circulated to discussion groups, high schools and colleges which declare openly or subtly suggest that Red China should be admitted to the U.N. and recognized by America. Let's not be taken in by such propaganda which seeks to influence a compromise with evil. Ambassador Tong was an overnight guest in my home. We have met for 11 years. I consider Ambassador Tong's message and the morality of his cause of great importance to our nation and to the future of all mankind.
