Unique "Baby-Sit" Exchange Plan Proves Success

The Bel-Aire Hills Baby Sitting Exchange looked back last week on its first year of successful operation. Desirous of being able to attend parties, dances and other formal and informal get-togethers without having to spend money each time for a baby-sitter, the original group of women forming the club came up with the unique plan of exchanging time instead of money for sitting services.

During the first year of operation the 15 members of the group exchanged a total of 375 hours of baby-sitting time with no money involved, no other remuneration and any connection with any other organization.

A club bookkeeper is in charge of seeing all members have sitters when they want them and takes care of books, recording debit and credit hours for each member. In return for her services she receives one-quarter hour of credit per month from each member.

A list of by-laws was drawn up by the original members of the organization and the exchange is guided by these laws.

The exchange is open to all women in the Bel-Aire subdivision area. Other women wishing to join will be welcomed, it was indicated. Persons wishing more information about the exchange in Bel-Aire or to obtain information in an effort to start a similar exchange elsewhere are asked to call the Bel-Aire Exchange bookkeeper, Margaret Schrader, GR. 4-9270.
