

Fish must have oxygen to live. When a body of water doesn't produce enough oxygen, fish suffocate. This sometimes occurs on snow-covered lakes during winter months.

Will-O-Way Opens New Course

Registrations are now being accepted for the second four-week course of the new summer program at Will-O-Way Apprentice Theatre, West Long Lake Road, Bloomfield Hills, Michigan.

The new program for children, teenagers and adults combines dramatic training with supervised recreation.

The recreational program includes arts and crafts, puppeteering, fencing, baseball, badminton, volleyball, basketball, photography and other interests and hobbies.

Professional theatre courses will be offered in speech, play production, radio and television techniques, lighting, costumes, scenery construction, properties and make-up.

The school is approved by the Michigan State Board of Education. Children will attend classes four days, Tuesday through Friday. Hours are 9 a.m. to 12 noon or 1 to 4 p.m. The children are grouped according to ability and the limit is 12 per class.

Teenagers will attend classes two days, Tuesdays and Thursdays or Wednesdays and Fridays. Hours will be 7 to 9 p.m. or 9 to 11 p.m.

Additional information may be obtained by calling Celia Meyer, Turner, director of the Apprentice Theatre at MidWest 4-4118.

Northwest Realty Association Pays Tribute To 25-Year Members

The United Northwestern Realty Association, the oldest and largest independent multiple listing group in the country, recently honored its 25-year members.

Thirty-two members received plaques presented at the Sea Food Grotto before the largest luncheon crowd of the year, including the wives of the honored guests.

Included in this group of men well-known in Detroit real estate circles were: Arthur B. Anderson, C. A. Bostick, Edmund J. Buck, William F. Bromberg, J. F. Burdick, J. Carlos Deremo, John J. Devine, J. J. Garstecki, John Hartner, William B. Grabendine, Victor E. Gustafson, Frank J. Hannafin, Harry J. Heiden, Fred T. Hayes, Carl H. Irey, Herbert E. Klotz, Edward H. Knebusch, H. J. Lane, Joseph E. Larranger, J. M. McLean, Marion Magnuszewski, Weld S. Maybee, William Mills, James W. Mitchell, Ernest Oliver, Otto C. Schultz, Ralph E. Tonnison, Howard J. Smith, Frank L. Sykes, James L. Valiquett, George A. Ward, and Alex H. Young.

George H. Casenheiser, one of the seven Charter Members of the UNRA, was a guest at the meeting. The Association which is now composed of 150 offices, with over 1,025, was organized in 1919 and began multi-listing in 1920. Since that time, UNRA has enjoyed a steady growth until today the Association does an annual business in excess of $60,000,000.

This will be the first year that the UNRA plans to hold summer meetings. Programs are being arranged for two meetings, to be held July 18 and August 15.

Water continues to, increase in importance and value as a mineral resource. Each citizen in modern society requires more than 1200 gallons daily to meet direct and indirect needs. For example, it takes 65,000 gallons of water to produce one ton of finished steel.

The 35,000 figure represents an annual increase of 3,500 teachers, or about 86 per cent more than the 4,050 teachers now educated each year. The increased demand is the result of the heavy enrollments in elementary schools brought on by a high birthrate during World War I which continues to the present.

This wave of children is expected to reach its peak in the elementary schools in 1961, and, as it moves throughout the school system, to reach its peak in the secondary schools in 1965, the report states. While enrollments in the public schools have been increasing rapidly, enrollment in the non-public schools has grown more than four times as fast. Non-public schools enrolled four out of every 10 new pupils during the 1940-50 decade. The latest data available (for the 1949-51 period) show the pupil-teacher ratio in non-public elementary schools to be 34.1 compared to 29.1 in public schools. In secondary schools, the pupil-teacher ratio in the non-public schools was 37.1, and in the public schools 25.1, an even greater disparity.

Good Highways Not To Be Found 70 Years Ago

Seventy years ago there was scarcely a decent stretch of highway anywhere in the United States, says Fred C. Kelly, author and former newspaperman, in the current issue of the Michigan Alumni Quarterly Review, published at The University of Michigan.

According to Kelly, when the safety bicycle came into popular use in the 1880's you couldn't ride a few miles from one city to another on a road that any optimist would have called even fairly good. "The railroads had replaced stagecoaches, and if you wanted to go much distance you took a train," he says.

Kelly maintains the farmers didn't mind the bad roads because they thought good roads would bring more city slickers to the country. He writes, "It was almost unheard-of for a farmer to own a bicycle. When a bicyclist rode into the country and got stuck in the mud, the farmers laughed heartily and said, 'Get a horse,' just as they did later to automobilists. They did not foresee the time when it would be hard to sell a farm on a poor road."

He reminds that the less disgraceful roads consisted of gravel dumped to fill ruts or holes and gradually worn down by horses' hoofs and wagon wheels. "The first piece of concrete street paving in the United States or in the western hemisphere was started on June 12, 1891, a strip ten feet wide and 200 feet long."

Says Physical Ed. In Grades Needed

Physical education at the elementary level is the Great Sahara of American education, says Paul Hunsicker, associate professor of physical education at The University of Michigan.

"The great majority of elementary school children in the United States do not have a physical education," he says. "In fact, 91 per cent of American elementary schools do not have a gymnasium and about the same number lack space essential for play areas."

The professor calls for a more challenging elementary school physical education program. Instruction in activities like swimming, skiing, golf, handball, table tennis, gymnastics, tumbling, skating, badminton, archery, basketball, bowling, soccer, softball, speed-ball, touch football, track and field, volleyball, camping, horse-back riding, wrestling, and tennis is possible, he asserts.

Abel To Speak At Glen Oaks

Sid Abel, a member of the Detroit Red Wing Hockey team for 13 years and captain for seven, will make a personal appearance before the Detroit Club of Printing House Craftsmen at the Glen Oaks Country Club on Tuesday, July 16, at 7 p.m. The program will include film highlights of the 1957 Detroit Red Wing Stanley Cup Playoff games, plus interesting sidelights of hockey. A round-table discussion will be held following the presentation.

Appearance of Abel is part of a state-wide tour designed to enlighten sports enthusiasts concerning the world's fastest game. The tour, sponsored by The Stroh Brewery Company, will continue through the months of July and part of August.

STOCKTON, KAN., RECORD: "Ever since J. Edgar Hoover announced a few months ago that he was of the opinion that the names of juvenile offenders should be publicized, there has been considerable argument pro and con in the press of this country. . . . More and more the pendulum seems to be swinging to Mr. Hoover's idea."

Marquette county, largest of Michigan's 83 counties, also contains the most lakes and the most miles of streams. The county contains 835 lakes, about 1500 miles of streams and 65 miles of Lake Superior shoreline.
