

Detroit Symphony Celebrates 50 Years

The Special Golden Anniversary Concert of The Detroit Symphony Orchestra will be held at 8:30 p.m. on Thursday, Nov. 19, at Ford Auditorium. The orchestra played its first public concert on Nov. 19, 1914, with Weston Gales on the podium at the old Detroit Opera House.

At Thursday's concert, Robert B. Sempke, president of The Detroit Symphony Orchestra, and Ralph T. McEvenny, chairman of the Golden Anniversary Financial Campaign, will make an important announcement regarding the status of the Golden Anniversary Fund Drive.

Celloist Rohan de Saram will be soloist for this concert, which will be conducted by Sixten Ehrling. Saram, a young Singaporean (celist who studied with Casals, Casado, and Navarra, will perform Dvorak's Concerto for Cello and Orchestra. The orchestral portions of the program will include Weber's Overture to "Oberon," Beethoven's Symphony No. 9, and Web-

SYBIL KUCZYNSKI of 18940 Curtis, Livonia, can be seen currently in the title role of Jean Anouilh's modern version of the classic drama "Antigone" at the University of Detroit Repertory Theatre. Curtain time at the U. of D. Theatre is 8:30 p.m. on Friday, Nov. 20, on Nov. 19 and Nov. 21. Mollere's "School for Wives" will be performed. For ticket information contact the U. of D. Theatre Box Office at 342-1000.

Squares Hold Square Dance

Want to enjoy an informal evening of square dancing with a congenial group? Then join the Kendallwood Squares. They meet the first and third Fridays of each month, and travel to each other's homes. Western dress is optional, and informality is the rule. Walter and Helen Bone do a marvelous job of calling the dances.

The next meeting will be at the home of the Stan Guzik's on Bayberry. Time is 8:30. Coffee and refreshments will be served following the dancing. The price is $2 a couple. Any one living in the surrounding area is invited to come.

Free Concert on Sunday

A Sacred Music Concert will be presented at the Nankin Mills Baptist Church Nov. 22 beginning at 7 p.m. The Church is located at 32430 Ann Arbor Trail, Garden City. James Alward on the harpsichord will be featured. Jan Leslie, Jack Hansticker and John Holm will play the flute. Also on the program are Pat Brown and Robert Ramseyer, voice; Beverly Murray, piano; and Bernard Sheek, organ. Music by Handel, Sweelinck, Debussy, Beethoven and Bach will be performed. The public is invited to the free concert.

Nankin Mills Production of "Laura" Fine Theater

By SUE SHAUGHNESSY
The Nankin Mills Players opened their 1964-65 season last weekend with a fine production of the "mystery-melodrama" "Laura."
"Laura" is set in a spacious, contemporary New York apartment and concerns the solving of a murder. This is further complicated by the fact that the murderer has a case of mistaken identity and killed the wrong girl.
When the real "Laura" reappears on the scene after a sojourn in the wilds of Connecticut everyone including the detective assigned to the case is non-plused.
An excellent performance was turned in by Jean Daniels in the title role. Larry Whalen as the detective, Mark McPherson, was good although spotty. Perhaps the most annoying lapse in his performance was his frequent loss of the limp that played such a part in his character.

Bill Irwin who played the not too intelligent boy friend, Shelby Carpenter, did a fine job in support. Bob Kraft as Waldo Lydycker was refreshingly pompous, but one sometimes wished that the director had blocked the scenes to enable him to sit or stand still for just a moment.
Plaudits should also go to Kent Eber and Jean Varterasian for their fine performances in supporting roles.
The scenery was elegant. However, one small disturbing note was the fact that the coffee service used just didn't fit in either with the apartment or the character of Laura.
All in all, however, it was an enjoyable evening of community theatre.
The next presentation of the Nankin Mills Players is slated for May 7 and 8 when they will present "Send Me No Flowers." A special children's show, which will be announced at a later date, will be held on Jan. 29.
