Looking Ahead

By DR. GEORGE S. BENSON

Common words like "Prime Minister" and "Minister" are used in a variety of ways. In the United States, the word "Minister" is used to refer to a high-ranking official in a government or church. In the United Kingdom, the word "Minister" is used to refer to a member of the cabinet. In the United States, the word "Prime Minister" is used to refer to the head of government.

At Transport House, a taxicab drive distance from Westminster Hall, I interviewed George Springall, a leader of the Socialist-Labor Party. He is a member of the party's executive committee and is responsible for the party's relations with the press. He is a member of the party's executive committee and is responsible for the party's relations with the press.

Then, I have talked to the people who are teaching in a London school, the breadwinner of a family of four, and others — and have actually sampled the living standard at various levels of the population. Day to day living conditions have improved considerably since the time, seven years ago, when a group of gang, hungry-looking (and hungry-looking) Englishmen visited our section of the United States and were so amazed at the abundance of food in America.

In comparison to the days of actual hunger in the immediate post-war years, the living standard today is much better. This relative improvement is what influences many leaders to feel that England today is genuinely prosperous. By our American standards she certainly isn't. Average wages in industry have gone up 55 per cent since 1950 but consumer prices have gone up about 42 per cent. Prices continue to climb. The newspaper headlines carry consumer protests against commodities being "held too dear." Inflation continues to erode the purchasing power of every British citizen.

Mr. Springall, the Labor Party's statistics on wages; and I later double-checked them with the Conservative Party Research Department. The average work week is 48 hours. The skilled industrial worker receives on the average about 31,500 a year, a dollar and cents improvement of almost $500 since 1950. Yet inflation has wiped out most of the increase. Other workers have an income scale much lower. Considerably more than half of all the people with incomes in England's heavily socialized welfare state make less than $120 a month, and 40 per cent make less than $100. Taking everything into consideration England's welfare state citizenry lives about the same as well as we do in America. More about this next week.

cinet workers feel they had a key role in the Democratic party.

Republicans took up the same sort of program.

Don E. Ahrens, former vice president of General Motors (Gadillac division), was named party finance chief. He has experience with a number of local campaign drives.

First move was to start a "Republican United Fund" campaign, and suggested that party members contribute $1 a month, or year, to provide a continuing fund to pay expenses.

Ahrens is interested in "business-like concepts, budgeting of necessary expenditures, thorough audits, and the utmost in establishing financial responsibility by party leaders."

MICHIGAN'S PRISONS are still overcrowded. This has been an annual complaint since the 1952 riots at Southern Michigan Prison at Jackson.

There have been a number of building and remodeling projects, but still there are more prisoners than cells.

The latest problem is the state's women prisoners, now stationed at the Detroit House of Correction, itself overcrowded.

Last month, the state corrections commission urged quick action to take over the Detroit House of Correction, at least its women's division.

The theory was that, if the commission was charged with the responsibility of caring for and rehabilitating all state prisoners, it should have jurisdiction over the facilities.

In addition, an investigating group hired by Detroit concluded that the institution was ill-fitted and ill-administered to care for prisoners.

The state commission then said it should either make the Detroit prison a state institution or build a women's prison of its own.

That led to a proposal by Senator Elmer R. Porter, of Blissfield, that the state take over one of its less-occupied tuberculosis hospitals, as if women's prison.

Whether it can or will be done must await the next legislative session, starting next January.

If you aren't hungry for breakfast first thing in the morning, pack it to eat later. An orange, a hard-cooked egg and a nut bread-cream cheese sandwich taste pretty good with milk in an hour or so.
