Township Industrial Zoning

The following question and answer series in explanation of the various phases of the proposed industrial zoning for Farmington Township is being presented as a matter of public information by the Township Planning Board.

QUESTION: Will industrial zoning depreciate values of surrounding property?

ANSWER: Not where proper planning is carried out for the surrounding property. There are types of residential or commercial development that accept being near to industrial areas and the land values in this case are higher because of a more concentrated use.

QUESTION: Can a purely residential area afford the expense of providing and maintaining the services it requires?

ANSWER: Only in case most of the residents live on larger plots of land and their income is in a definitely higher bracket. In this case there is no concentration of population and there is not any need of attendant municipal services. The average income of people in Farmington Township is considerably below the amount required to get along without industrial and commercial enterprises.

QUESTION: Will the industrial zone be reserved exclusively for industry?

ANSWER: Not exactly. Commercial enterprises that serve industry will be permitted there and commercial enterprises that would be undesirable within residential areas will be urged to locate in the industrial zone. Many cities which do not have much industry do have considerable commercial enterprises. In fact commercial enterprises pay considerably more taxes above the expense they incur than strictly industrial enterprises do.

By 1956, states one source, fully 32 percent of all the gasoline, kerosene, and distillate fuel oil produced in this country will move by pipe line.

Looking Ahead
By DR. GEORGE B. BENSON
average industrial worker in Austria is $57 a month. Some make more and some make less, but the average is $57 a month. The textile industry workers average only $38.50 a month. These are official government figures supplied to me by Dr. Font.
The purchasing power of the dollars in these wage statistics is based on the present exchange rate of shillings for dollars (25 to 1). A few items are cheaper here than in America - public transportation, housing, and a few food staples such as potatoes, cabbage and bread. But public transportation service is chronically poor and the housing situation is very bad. Most of the other things that Americans contend to be absolutely required for good living cost more here - TV sets, refrigerators, bathroom sinks, good clothing, automobiles, leveling Down.
Vienna is a teeming tourist city. The tourist business is an important part of the national income. Relics of the old Hapsburg dynasties - palaces, parks and statues - the city. Moments of the city's great musical history are on every hand - with the ornate Vienna Opera House on the celebrated Ring attracting thousands of sight-seers daily. The shops are world-famed for two products - silks and chocolate confections.
With its bizarre and anguished sculptures commemorating the devastating Black Plague, with its colorful mosaic street fronts, and with its modern, subterranean shopping center beneath the busiest traffic intersection, Vienna is a city of contrasts. But there seems to be scarcely any contrasts in the lives of her people and the people of Austria generally. Dr. Font said there aren't any rich people in Austria; that, in fact, Government redistribution of wealth had almost entirely eliminated sharp differences in incomes. The Austrian Welfare State has leveled the living standard - to a very low level. Thirty-five percent of Socialist power and the turmoil of radical politics and war have left Austria with very little strength and nearly all of her people in relative poverty according to our American yardsticks.
