Wants More Emphasis on Academic Subjects

Parents, taxpayers and citizens in general who are interested in the development of Farmington Public Schools may be concerned about the announcement in last week's Enterprise that Farmington plans to expand its industrial arts program next year.

In the Farmington School District Survey published by the Farmington Area Council of Parent Teacher Associations on October 15, 1957, we find a list of the present offerings. Let us compare them with the program offered in other schools. Let us compare them with the program offered in other schools. Let us compare them with the program offered in other schools.

Perhaps these added courses could be integrated into the school curriculum without diminishing the academic courses already there. Usually, when some courses are added others must be discarded. Eventually, if this process goes on, the academic offerings will be curtailed, limited and decreased.

It is certainly true that parents, citizens and taxpayers - as well as our children themselves give some serious study to the matter of curriculum. It is only in this way that the School Board and Administration of our schools can know what really is the desire of the electorate.

What's New At The Library

March 16 - 22 will mark the observance of the first National Library Week in communities throughout the United States and in many foreign lands. Citizens and organizations will be heading together to make strong the key-stone of our democratic freedom.

National Library Week is the week when the value of books and reading is emphasized. Mrs. J. W. Droege, assistant librarian, said:

The National Book Committee, a group interested in the promotion of books and reading, started the special week. The steering committee for the week is made up of the National Book Committee, a group interested in the promotion of books and reading, started the special week.

Its objective is "a better read, a better informed citizenry." The slogan for the week is "Wake Up and Read."

"A library reflects the attitude of its citizens toward the community," Mrs. Droege said.

"Two of our late citizens who were civic minded left their life savings for library purposes. Let your public library be a part of National Library Week. Compare it with libraries you have seen in communities of comparable size. The Farmington Library Board is called the responsibilities and duties we have entrusted upon them and they are extending every effort toward the library's growth and development."

"If we make this a community responsibility, we can celebrate with justifiable pride the second National Library Week in 1958, in a library that will fill the various needs of all," Mrs. Droege concluded.

Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Garavaglia and Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Cleys all of New Baltimore, and Mr. and Mrs. William Arnold of Saint Clair, Michigan, will be at the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Arnold of Westmore Street.
