Goodwill Pickup Slated July 21, 22

Goodwill Industries has a suggestion that will fit into a "stay at-home" type of vacation and at the same time help its physically handicapped employees.

Mrs. Lora Ault, Goodwill Industries' telephone representative for Farmington and Franklin Village, said today:

"Children outgrow clothes rapidly at pre-school and school age, and often mothers, without realizing it, save these clothes until school begins before replacing them.

"Goodwill Industries needs clothing now, and if those who are spending their summer at home would contribute this clothing immediately, it would help keep nearly 450 physically handicapped persons at work through the summer months.

"A contributor of Goodwill Industries helps the handicapped help themselves without costing the giver any money and very little time.

"The contributor also receives a moral uplift in the knowledge that he has helped his neighbor.

"As has been suggested by government officials, a vacation at home can mean a very happy summer. Contributions of clothing and other repairable discards will mean a happy summer for the physically handicapped," said Mrs. Ault.

The next visit of the Goodwill truck to Farmington and Franklin Village is scheduled for Monday and Tuesday, July 21 and 22. If you would like the truck to stop at your home to collect your discards, call Mrs. Lora Ault at GR 4-4294.

THIS IS THE REAR (working) end view of the new city street sweeper. It's a sleek monster, and really doing an efficient job since put into operation a week or so ago. Regular operator is Alpha Ray Edward, and standing at right is Floyd Sallow, superintendent of the department of public works. The circular wire brush pushes dirt from the gutter in front of the wide brush beneath the machine. A 250-gallon tank of water keeps the brushes from raising and spreading the dust, and the damp gatherings are deposited in a large hopper which is emptied a couple times a day. This sweeper replaces an older one, much smaller, which had become expensive to maintain. It was part of the city's planned expenditures over a period of time.

Anyone Can Do It, Says 78-Year-Old Professor

A university professor of 78 hit the nail on the head recently when we were discussing the problem of providing financial security for later years.

"Mr. Elliott," he said, "I never earned a large salary. Yet, today, I'm enjoying a comfortable retirement income, guaranteed as long as I live. And anyone can accomplish the same thing by following a simple plan like yours."

Stuart I. Elliott

Now this column doesn't often seek direct response from its readers. But if you've been saying to yourself: "I wish I had a plan, within my means, that would enable me to ease up some day, a plan to which I could add from time to time," then let me ask you — yes, urge you — to send for a copy of the Phoenix Mutual Retirement Income catalog.

It describes 14 different plans and shows how you can retire at 55, 60, 65, or 70. It outlines joint plans for husbands and wives — plans for professional men—for business women—and for many others.

Just drop me a line, and you'll receive the catalog by return mail — without cost or obligation. Send for it today. It may mean a great deal to you in the years ahead.
