Timely Tips on

GARDENING

By Betty Frankel

Autumn's blazing brilliance is fading as the leaves drop from the trees. When the leaves are shed, trees must be pruned. The roots are not pruned. Most shrubs and small trees can be moved "bare root," but care must be taken that the roots are not broken and that the tiny feeder roots do not become dried out. Large trees can be moved "bare root" but only by a professional crew. Planning can continue as long as the ground can be worked.

Because large trees with their balled and burlapped roots weigh a great deal it is often convenient to wait to plant them until the ground is solidly frozen. Then a truck can bring them to the planting site without damaging the roots. A large hole should be prepared before the ground freezes. It can be covered with a tarpaulin or mulched with leaves.

When planning a shrub border, three or four plants of the same variety should be grouped together. The landscaping is more unified. The shrubs are especially effective when they are in bloom. Although this may decrease the total number of different varieties, it is a million of Brighton, there is still ample opportunity to provide a succession of bloom.

When cherries and forsythias are among the earliest to bloom. They flower in mid-April. Flowering almonds, honey-suckle, lilacs, and the sweetest of all, Forsythia, bloom in May. Beauty Bush, Weigela, and Mock Orange are among the more popular June-flowering shrubs. Forsythia blooms in July and Rose of Sharon in August.
