C-C Gets Data On Highways

The state highway building program is a shot in the arm for the Michigan economy, according to a speaker before the Farmington Chamber of Commerce members' council luncheon Tuesday night.

He was William Skidmore, office manager of the Redford highway dept. facility. Although he had been asked to speak about parking on freeways, he explained this was out of his department. He did answer many questions by members present, however.

The department is now trying to auction off various odd parcels of land acquired over the years for highway building. It hopes to use the money gained for matching federal highway funds, to stretch Michigan work as far as possible.

THE CHAMBER will dispense with member meetings for July and August, it was voted.

The board of directors has been trying to work out ways it can cooperate with township zoning officials, and to better serve industry and financial organizations. It approved programs by the Onto-Dallas committee, and the Little League baseball organization.

A new member is William Bowman, who has replaced Howard Nager as representative of Thompson-Brown Co. A new associate member is Arthur Bomber, of Farmington Auto Parts.

The usual prize was awarded Thomas Moss.

Don Pullen Leaves For Colorado Job

Donald D. Pullen, who was manager of the Farmington Chamber of Commerce from its inception two years ago until recently, is moving with his family to Colorado as soon as school is out.

Mr. Pullen is returning to public relations work in that state, which he did prior to coming to Farmington more than two years ago as manager of Oakland Hills Memorial Gardens.

He recently went to Colorado, and may or may not locate in Denver, Mr. Pullen has also helped out the Chamber at various times, acting as temporary secretary, and both will be missed by Chamber officials and business men.

Fifth Grade Class at Ten Mile Has Special "Parents' Night"

On Wednesday, May 27, approximately 80 parents and friends were in attendance at a special Parents' Night Open House put on by Maynard Harris' 5th grade class at the Ten Mile elementary school.

The purpose of the open house, held in the multi-purpose room, was to demonstrate to parents some of the activities and projects their children participated in during the school year, establish a friendlier personal contact between the school and the home, allow the parents to meet the teacher on an informal basis and allow parents to meet each other on the same basis.

The program was divided into two parts. The first dealt with the band, vocal and rhythmic activities of the children, and the second with the highlights of academic work done by the children during the school year.

Part I opened with a welcome by the class president followed by the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner" under the direction of the class officers. Following an introduction of the teacher, special recognition was given to the room mothers, Mrs. Paulson and Mrs. Moss, as well as other mothers who contributed during the school year.

The class band then played, led by elementary band director Lloyd Smith. Following the singing of various songs by the whole class, folk dancing was demonstrated by them with an interpretation number being included.

Following a 15 minute recess or refreshments and a chance to look at class displays, the second part of the program was presented.

Farmington Glens is a new subdivision just west of Farmington Meadows, being planned by Harold Luvich. The plot shows from 50 to 100 lots, but has been held up waiting for proposed changes in the streets, so they match with the subdivision to the south.
