"I wish Lloyd would tell me something."

While Lloyd didn't let anything out of the bag as far as Hannum was concerned, Earl did spill some interesting words the other evening when he appeared as the featured speaker before the Plymouth Ilous Club.

"The best advice I can give to fathers who think they have sons who are good athletes is to not encourage the boys to seek a career as a professional sports performer," Lloyd declared.

Lloyd quickly added:
"Belleve me, I'm not knocking my profession.
Playing in pro sports, especially in any of the major leagues, if the greatest thing that can happen to a person.
"But, keep in mind thesa facts."

person.

"But, keep in mind these facts."

And then Lloyd elaborated.

"Very few, athletes really become a success in pro sports. In our league we have only 99 players all together.
Hockey doesn't have many more. Baseball and football, of course, have more, but take a look at the number of boys who engage in these sports throughout the country.

"Those who get to the majors represent a minute percentage.

It takes a boy with exceptional ability to advance to major-league status. Even the bench warmers in the National Basketball Association were All Americas in

After a momentary pause, Lloyd declared:
"Now let us consider the boys with average scholastic ability, in high school. True, college enrollment requirements are getting tougher, but just about any boy who wishes can get to some school of higher learning. "With just his average ability, the boy can choose from many different courses... and professions.
"He has a far better chance of being a success as a mechanic, engineer, doctor, dentist or lawyer than he would if he put all his eggs into a professional sports basket.
"Then, there's something else to remember. The "Then, there's something else to remember. The athletic career of the professional is short. Most don't last five years in the majors, hardly enough time to make last five years in the majors, many choose an abundle of money.

"This means that the boy must make a decision at age 30 to go into another job. Only by getting proper training in school can he be ready to enter a more sustained occupation."
