

A BIG INCREASE in donations to ALSAC (the teenagers' anti-leukemia fund drive) was recorded this year in Livonia, as more than $5,000 was collected by volunteers last week. Maura Taormina, 14, 9611 Cranston, (left) was the top individual collector, with $347.75 to her credit. As ALSAC chairman Diane Gustin (center) looks on, she congratulates Les Halasi, 17, 27731 Buckingham, top area chairman who turned in $305. Last year's drive netted $3,500.

Invite All Suburbanites to Enroll in Livonia Night School Classes

Registrations for more than 120 hobby, cultural, vocational, and liberal arts classes to be held in the Livonia public schools this fall will be taken at Bentley High School tonight, tomorrow, and Friday from 7:30 to 9 p.m.

Board policy, according to Livonia superintendent Benton Yates, makes it possible for non-residents to pay the same fees for courses in fine arts, business education, language, liberal arts, health, family life, and other continuing education classes as are paid by Livonians.

"We've found that this attitude enriches the lives of all suburban students at no added cost to district taxpayers," Superintendent Yates pointed out. "If we didn't invite our neighbors to join us we would have to trim off some of the unusual hobby courses we are able to offer. We couldn't afford to hire a teacher for a class in fur restyling or china painting if only six Livonians showed up. But when we add two from Farmington, four from Plymouth, and a half dozen more from Clarenceville, Wixom Mills, or elsewhere in the metropolitan area, we can offer the course and enrich all of the lives of those who are looking for help with a hobby

City Wins Award for Its Report

Plymouth placed first in the Class III category which was open to towns and cities with a population of less than 10,000.
