

Vivian Picks 3 Paintings At Festival

Early this year, U. S. Rep. Weston E. Vivian (Mich., 2nd District) offered to artists back home an opportunity to display paintings and other works of art in his office in Washington.

Widespread interest in this project has produced an unusually attractive Congressional office—and, occasionally, has resulted in a sale.

Recently sold was a painting by a Lenawee County artist, Mrs. Evelyn Gustaf, who studied at one time with Ralph Kelley, of Plymouth.

Congressman Vivian, who co-sponsored the recently passed legislation to establish a National Foundation of the Arts and Humanities, visited the exhibit of the Three Cities Art Club at Kelllogg Park during this year's Plymouth Fall Festival. There he had an opportunity to select three works by Plymouth area artists for display in his Washington office.

The works selected are a landscape by Franklin York of 3801 Bellevue; a painting entitled "Big Town, U.S.A." by Mrs. Doe Wood of 14067 Bainsbridge, Livonia; and a woodcut entitled "Evening Landscape" by Mrs. Jessie Hudson of 44551 North Territorial.

Area Senior Citizens Participate in Exhibit

Paintings, ceramics, copper and metal crafts, woodworking, crocheting, jewelry, knitting, leather crafts, needlework, taxidermy, photography, the whole range of hand arts and crafts will be on display.

Spending agencies of the event include the Museum, the Detroit Archdiocesan Council of Catholic Women and the Martin Koenig Guild which supports social services of the center in the near west side of Detroit.

Area residents who have already entered the exhibit are from Redford Township: Henry Stevens; Betty J. Matthews; and Nicholas M. Werdell.

Garden City: Grace M. Chipps and Miss M. Spelaw; Wayne: Velma L. Meier and Mrs. Hal-ford H. Brownell; and Laona: Glenn B. Baber; Mrs. Anne Malloy; Mrs. Kay Janowski; Mrs. Justin Rogers and C. L. Bowdler.

'Verses of Companionship'
(Editor's note: The following review of "Along the Highway" is from David McLellan, a poet who lives in Farmington.)
By DAVID McLELLAN
The book "Along the Highway" by Clara M. Gekill tells me of a quiet gravel road in the country, at the turn of the century. Her verse appears to have become her companion rather than her exaltation. The tenets of the church appear to have been embraced to assure an orderly life. Fearing for the morals of the church appear to have been a farmer's daughter to be shameful, but did she love it; I do not know.

PICTURE TALK

by Les Wilson

BOXED SUNSHINE

I'm talking about the kind of sunshine you see for indoor pictures. And, believe me, Kodak has wrapped all up in sunshine plus camera, in the neatest packages you've ever seen. Flashcube photography.

Take the new KODAK INSTAMATIC 104 Camera, for instance. For indoor pictures, here's all you do. Just drop in the film cartridge, pop on a new flashcube and start shooting. Shoot four flash pictures in a row without changing bulbs. Shoot as fast as you can click the shutter and advance the film, and never lose a flash picture opportunity! After each shot, the flashcube rotates automatically to set you up for the next picture. Take four flash pictures in a row, then toss away the flashcube. Pop on another and you're ready to go again.

Along with instant loading and pop-on flash, there are other reasons why you'll like the "104." The lens is factory-focused. A flick of your thumb, and the quick-action lever advances the film, positions the next frame, keeps track of exposures, and a "104" flashcube rotates before film is advanced. The shutter automatically shifts to flash speed when you pop on the flashcube.

You can walk out with a new KODAK INSTAMATIC 104 Camera, with strap, film cartridge and flashcube for only $17.95. And that should put a little more sunshine in your life.
