The account of the Swift's trip to Europe has been delayed another week as that lovely new granddaughter has taken up a lot of Ginny's time as all grandparents under stand.

Ginny and Bob flew to London, crossed the Channel and landed first to Brussels, Belgium, and then to Heidelberg, Germany. Here they enjoyed the student middle life at one of the famous pubs in this university town on the Neckar River. Then to Switzerland which was a high spot in their trip. They stopped at Lucerne; they traveled to the top of Mt. Pilatus by cog railway where they saw Swiss families in their mountain climbing regalia. They went down by cable car, which Ginny had vowed she would never do. It was very next and in Venice they were serenaded by the gondoliers on the Grand Canal. Luncheon at the Grillo Palace was a real treat. Next came Florence and then Rome. They were most impressed by the Vatican City and the Sistine Chapel in St. Peter's where they viewed the beautiful works of Michelangelo and other famous Italian artists. Dinner at Alfredo's world famous restaurant was a gourmet's delight. On the return trip north they made an overnight stop at beautiful Montreux, on Lake Geneva, Switzerland. Paris which really capped the climax. After seeing the leading attractions of this famous city, they took a night boat on the Seine, then saw the show at the Moulin Rouge. In the wee hours they went to Les Halles, the Paris market area and had famous onion soup at the Pigs Foot. In London again they did more sightseeing and shopping. A safe return flight got them home October 23 in time to welcome Deborah Jean.

Dick and Pat McGrath drove down to the Greenbrier in White Sulphur Springs, W. Va. for the convention of the National Fashion Door Jobbers Association. They left here the 22nd of October, stopped at the Columbus, O. airport to pick up a friend also attending the convention, and drove on to White Sulphur where they stayed at the Clover Club. Here they met other friends going to the convention and all had dinner together. They went over to the Greenbrier in the morning. Many played golf but Pat found it too cool for her. Congressman Gerald Ford was one of the speakers for the convention, he and Dick played golf together and they all sat at the same table at dinner. But the big event for the McGraths came on Tuesday, the 26th. That was the night of the big dinner dance and it was their 25th wedding anniversary.

They returned home the 29th. The Contos are also back from a 24 day trip to Europe which they took with the U. of Detroit. They visited London, England, Paris, France, Holland, Germany, Switzerland and here they too went up Mt. Pilatus—Italy where they visited Rome at the time of the flood, Florence, and Venice. On their return they spent a couple of days in N.Y. City where they saw Hall a Sixpence before returning to Detroit.

Mike and Helen Goldbaum and four of their children, the oldest stayed at home, drove up to Toronto, Canada, weekend before last for a family reunion. It was the occasion of a nephew's Bar Mitzvah, and some 60 members of his family went up from the Detroit area to be among the 700 who watched the impressive ceremony.

Tom and Bernice Jennings have bought a condominium at Deerfield Beach, Florida, in anticipation of retirement days.

The Women's Association met last week Tuesday at the home of Ethel Mainster with about 25 attending. It was very nice to welcome Helen Corneli to her first meeting with us. Theresa McKay and Marie France, our co-hostesses, served refreshments.

We want to welcome Jay and Helen Cornell to Wood Creek.
