'All's Well' Opens Jan. 19 at Classic

Black tie, tails and Beethoven's music will prove that Shakespeare is contemporary today as he was in the 17th Century when "All's Well That Ends Well" opens at Wayne State University's Hilberry Classic Theatre Wednesday, Jan. 19, at 8:30 p.m.

Performed in modern dress, the Shakespeare comedy will be the third play to join the classic repertory which extends through June 11. Shakespeare's "The Tempest" and "Othello" are opening Jan. 12 and 13, respectively, and will also appear on the current week's schedule.

"All's Well" directed by Richard D. Spear, is the tale of a popular folk theme—the battle of the sexes—with the woman chasing the man, and is remarkably 20th Century in feeling.
