Mrs. Johanna Baumann

Mrs Johanna Baumann passed away at her home near the Junction Sunday. Mrs. Bauman was born in Germany Dec. 16, 1823, coming to this country in 1851. She was married to Fred Baumann who passed away in April 1912, after having lived together 61 years. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Sallow, a nephew and niece, had kindly cared for them in their declining years, their only daughter having died several years ago.

The funeral was held from the German Evangelical church Tuesday afternoon and interment was made in the Clarenceville cemetery.

BUY FAKE "WORKS OF ART"

Millionaire Collectors Gather Much Stuff That Has No Real Value to the Owner.

"A fake Raphael costing half a million" marked J. Pierpont Morgan's debut into the collecting field," said, with an evil laugh, an art dealer.

"Morgan once showed with great pride a miniature of Mary, Queen of Scots, in the full bloom of her womanly beauty.

"'A Holbein,' he said, in his gruff, stern way. 'A Holbein masterpiece.'

"'How strange that is!' said I. 'And Holbein died before Mary, of Scots, was a year old, too!'

"I had a Botticelli that I wanted to sell Morgan. But it was a dubious Botticelli. So Morgan shook his head over it and said:

"'My collection contains only masterpieces, and every one of these masterpieces is authenticated.'

"'But,' said I, 'there's one fake in your collection—a fake Benvenuto Cellini.'

"'How do you know it's a fake?' said Mr. Morgan contemptuously.

"'Because I sold it to you myself,' said I.

"These millionaires are like children in our hands when they begin to collect objects of art. Why, a Fifth avenue trust magnate showed me a superb silver teapot the other day and said:

"'This belonged to William the Conqueror.'

"'Ha, ha, ha!' I roared. 'Don't you know, sir, that they didn't begin to brew tea in England till centuries after William the Conqueror was dead and buried?'

"No, he didn't know it, and he put the teapot away with an angry frown. I think he'd have contradicted me if he'd dared.

"When I am escorted through these millionaires' galleries I always think of John Sloan's remark about Corot.

"'The indefatigable Corot,' said Sloan, regarding me gravely through his black-rimmed pince-nez, 'painted during his long and laborious life 5,000 masterpieces, of which no less than 72,000 are still extant.'"

AUTO AILMENTS.

A formidable array of nervous and other ailments has been charged against motoring, the victims for the most part being women, indicating that this sport is overstrenuous for them. Among the ailments are the "auto eye" and the "auto leg." The auto eye is a spasm of the ciliary muscles, which govern accommodations for distances, the sight being constantly and rapidly attracted by objects now near, now distant, making an abnormal strain on the visual mechanism. The Journal of the American Medical Association describes the auto leg as a cramp due to sitting in one position for hours while the veins and muscles are under strain from consecutive shocks and joltings over hard roads.

BUILDS A SIXTEEN-FOOT TOY

Memphis Man Works Hard Best Part of Year at Something to Please His Small Grandson.

Pictrue a grandfather, aged seventy-three, working the greater part of the year on a composite mechanical toy that will please his little grandson at Christmas time. That man is J. G. Handwerker of No. 866 North Seventh street, Memphis, Tenn. Each winter he evolves something out of the ordinary for Earl Becker, his ten-year-old grandson. But the best part of the work is that it is good for the entire year and is a delight to grown-ups as well as youths. There now is in operation in his home a mechanical production that is the envy of the neighborhood children and is visiter by many adults who marvel at the patience and the precision required to produce the spectacle. The toy extends entirely across a sixteen-foot room. It represents a mountain surmounted by a Christmas tree that reaches to the ceiling. In the foreground, scattered over the mountain, are thirty mechanical figures. A bucking broncho is trying to throw its rider, an elephant is beating a drum, a housewife is shown sweeping before her electrically lighted home, and several automobiles are seen ascending the mountain. A monkey climbs up and down a rope suspended from a tree and there are other trained animals. The entire spectacle is driven by springs, belts and pulleys.

SAILOR REFUSED A THRONE

Dusky Princess Went With Offer of Rulership, So He Went Back to England.

The death has occurred at the age of ninety-three of Capt. Philip H. Nicholls of Manchester, England, who had a long and adventurous life on the sea.

A native of Sidmouth, Devon, Captain Nichols became a sailor when he was thirteen. For thirty-five years he followed his profession, and among his ships was one of the famous "tea clippers" which made quick passages from London to Hongkong before steamships became common.

His strangest adventure was when he was cruising in the Pacific. At the Sulu islands he became a favorite with the rulers, who conferred royal honors on him, presented him with the sword of state and other regalia and offered to give him an island for himself if he would settle there.

But the gallant captain discovered that in the background was an alliance with a dusky princess. His affections were already engaged, so he rejected the offer and returned to the sea.—New York Herald.

POOR PROVIDER.

The daughter of the family had received a proposal of marriage and the momentous subject was being discussed at the breakfast table next morning.

"Say, dad," spoke up Freddie, "I don't believe sister's feller will make a good husband."

"What makes you think so, my boy?" asked his father, with a smile.

"Why," returned Freddie, "he's been coming here for over a year, and in all that time he's given me only seventeen cents."—Judge.

GHOST STORY FOUND BELIEF

Suit That Presented Circumstantial Evidence in Favor of Those Claiming to See It.

One of the most circumstantial stories of apparitions is that of Old Booty's ghost, which is said to have been the subject of an action in the king's bench in 1688, relates the London Chronicle. It arose from a statement by a certain Captain Barnaby that when shooting rabbits on the island of Stromboli, in the Mediterranean, on Friday, May 15, 1687, he had seen Old Booty, his next door neighbor, running into the burning crater there, pursued by the devil. Mrs. Booty, the widow, had the captain arrested, and claimed a thousand pounds damages for what he had said.

But when the case was heard it was proved that Old Booty actually died within two minutes of the time he was said to have been seen on Stromboli, and that all the circumstances of the apparition were noted in the journals of three ships' captains present. And on Old Booty's clothes being produced in court they were identified by all the witnesses for the defense as those worn by the man who ran into the burning crater. Mrs. Booty lost her case, the judge remarking: "The Lord have mercy upon me and grant that I may never see what you have seen. One, two or three witnesses may be mistaken, but thirty never."

We played and we played till almost daylight.
I won all Jones' money—left him in a plight.
We thought of our wives and were filled with dismay,
So Jones and I homeward then wended our way.

COULDN'T BLAME HER.

A woman, visiting a butcher shop, called for a piece of beef. The butcher, in weighing it, had his hand on the scales. The lady, picking up a sharp knife and handing it to the butcher, remarked: "I haven't any use for it, but you may cut it off and I'll take it along, anyhow."

"Cut it off? Cut what off?" asked the butcher.

"Your hand; you weighed it."—National Monthly.

SECRET SUPERVISION.

"You believe that competition is the life of trade, do you not?"

"Yes," replied Mr. Dustin Stax. "But where there is competition there has to be some one to award the prizes, and that's the person I want my particular business to occupy."
