Just Chatter' How About a Soldier Memorial?

By W. W. EDGAR

As the final notes of "Taps" rent the morning air, bringing to a close the Memorial Day services in honor of those who laid down their lives in the military service of the country a fellow standing next to me remarked, casually, "well that's it for another year."

By his outward appearance he gave no evidence that he was a veteran whose feelings had been case-hardened in the crucible of enemy fire on any of the battle fields of the world. Neither did he give one the impression that he might be one of the modern cynics who smile and condone the draft card burning tactics of some segments of our modern youth.

He had been listening with rapt attention to the Memorial Day orator, seemingly drinking in every word of the patriotic address. Yet, there was something haunting about his remark. "Well that's it for another year."

Driving home these words kept ringing in my ear and I couldn't help but wonder if this was the general attitude. Had our appreciation for those who gave the last full measure of devotion dwindled to the point where it was concentrated into an hour or two on a parking lot far removed from the hallowed ground of the final resting place of those who had served their country?

If it has, then it is about time that we paused in our topsy-turvy struggle for existence and picked up again the strings of appreciation for the services rendered by our soldiers, sailors, marines and air force.

There was a time when most every city, town or hamlet had some tangible evidence on display. In many cases it was an old cannon mounted on wheels, with a pyramid of cannon balls at its side in the city or town square.

In later years, when these cannons became outmoded through man's scientific progress and planes and missiles and bombs came to the fire, it was almost impossible to display these weapons of war.

It was then that each town and hamlet proudly erected well designed bulletin boards on the town square or on the grounds of the Municipal buildings and listed the names of all the young men who had entered the call. Folks walked by and pointed with pride at the number of names on the list.

But these fancy boards soon appreciated and passed from view and nothing was done to replace them.

So, the time is here now, when once again we should show the service men our real appreciation.

Why not dedicate a park, or a town square to the memory of those who served in the unpleasantness of war in defense of our country and its ideals.

There are few, if any, communities that do not have some park area close to the center of town that could be transformed into a shrine that would stand as an every day symbol of our feelings.

Let's look around us and see what is available for this honorable purpose.

Almost in the center of Livonia, for example, is a 2.2 acre site purchased by the city years ago with hopes of developing it into a beautiful park site. It since has passed into the hands of the Livonia

Teen Fined For Throwing Oil at Boy

An oil change — on someone else's clothes — proved to be a costly one for Timothy Olech, 19, of 244 Deering, Garden City. Olech, charged with assault and battery in an oil throwing incident on April 23 was found guilty by Judge John Seller recently and fined $25 and $25.00 court costs.

The Garden City police department was told the Olech was driving on Florence Street near Middlebelt Road when he threw a can containing dirty engine oil at two pedestrians.

The carton struck one of the two, Ronald Dean, 14, of 2806 Rock, Garden City. The boy had oil on his face, in his hair, and on his clothes, some of which could not be cleaned.

Monte Hackman, 35, 556 Deering, Garden City, said he was a passenger in Olech's auto. There were three cartons and one tin containing the oil. Olech threw one of the cartons out of the car window.

The two boys who were the targets of the oil canister last month obtained the license number of the car as it drove away and police officers traced the ownership back to Olech.
