60 Area Teachers Study Suburbia

Nearly 60 suburban teachers representing 12 metropolitan area districts are rounding out four solid weeks of workshop research which should enrich the education of youngsters this fall and winter.

The group, engaged in a Michigan State University program designed to help classroom teachers better understand the communities in which they live, assembled in Livonia's Franklin high school and from there fanned out into factories, warehouses, nature centers, and the other cultural and mercantile objectives of their field trips.

The teachers are gathering information, facts, and reference materials on everything from art and crafts to pioneers, to savings and investment procedures to a close look at the many watercraft utilizing the Detroit River.

Corlan D. Bovee, Livonia school principal and director of the project, expressed pleasure at the enthusiastic way in which the teacher students were expressing their projects.

"A great many people believe that teachers are little but relax and travel a summer," Bovee observed. "This is not true. These groups are digging deeply into their cultural and community environments so that they can become more knowledgeable teachers and to bring new ideas and insights to their idealized classrooms this fall and winter."

Largest group of workshopers, nineteen in all, represent Livonia. Teaching at Adams elementary school are Judy Brielmair and Jeanne Kieshauser; at Holmes Marcella Brown; at Lincoln Patricia Redmon, Connie Seal, Betty Stone, and Elizabeth Thorpe; at Kennedy, J. J. Brewster; at Jackson, Barbara Morgan and Barbara Isham; at Marshall, Jeannine Ewing and Suzanne Sloat; at Roosevelt, Margaret Casey; at Jefferson, Kay Clark; at Hull, Polly Clemon; at Webster, Arleen Daniels; at Cooper, Jaclyn Portnoy; at Frost junior high school, Linda Fogg; and at Whittier junior high, Elizabeth Garvey.

From South Redford one, Josephine Pogus, represents Mann school, while three, Cynthia Brown, Marilyn Fredrickson, and Rachel Simpson teach at the Shear school.

Workshoppers from Redford Union include Dorothy Maddock and Lorraine Pincini from Keeler school;

Sybil Kohl and Gloria Schraudt from MacGowan; and Carol Gibbons a home economics teacher at Redford Union high school.

Detroit is represented by June Hudgins of Harding elementary, Wayne by second grade teacher Phyllis Hallman of Kettering school, Nankin Mills by Dorothy Hall, and Clarenceville by Charlene Dawes, who teaches third grade at Westbrook school.

All of the Cherry Hill contingent come from the Fischer school; principal Joyce Boyd is joined by Cory Anderson, Carolyn Notestine, and Sue Thompson.

Four of the Crestwood school district workshopers teach at Highview school: Nan Crossland, Lorraine Kuhn, Jeannine Fox, and Suellyn Sekulich; while two, Kathleen Kauffman and Evelyn Maszy teach at Berwyn school.

Dearborn Heights teachers participating in the summer action are Dorothy Silvers of Eton school and Harriet Stafford at Pardee school.

Farmington teachers enrolled in the workshop are kindergarten teacher Mary Bantle and fifth grade teacher Paula Brown.

Garden City school art consultant, Linda Limonoff is a participant, along with high school teacher Robert Fogg and fourth grade teacher, Mary Ann Newton.

At the close of the workshop the group will publish handbooks to make available to other teachers the results of their summer research.

The teachers also plan to have an "open house" so that friends and fellow-educators can see the artifacts and teaching materials workshopers collected during their busy days in Livonia this summer.

Stenger Named Dean at College

Robert Stenger, a teacher at Schoolcraft College since classes first started two years ago, has been appointed Acting Dean of Academic Instruction for the 1966-67 college year.

His appointment was approved by the College Board of Trustees upon recommendation of President Dr. Eric Bradner and Vice President John Brinn.

Brinn made the recommendation to Dr. Bradner who in turn affirmed it to the Trustees.

In accordance with the college's wage scale for professional and administration personnel, Stenger will be boosted from his present $9,755 to the Dean level at $12,600.

Stenger joined the Schoolcraft faculty after serving five years at Plymouth High School where he was chairman of the English Department for two years.

He is a native of Beaver, Pa. where he was a star miler on the track team. At one point in his athletic career, Stenger was rated among the five top milers in the world, recording his best clocking in a meet in Cologne, Germany, when he ran against the famed Roger Bannister and was third in 4:07.

Bannister will be remembered as the first miler to crack the four minute mile barrier.

Stenger holds a bachelor's degree from Eastern Michigan University and has taken additional work towards his master's degree.

He started his teaching career at Rogers City where he taught for two years. Then he moved to Plymouth where he was a member of the staff for five years before accepting the Schoolcraft assignment.

Michigan local boards will be requested to deliver an additional 750 registrants for induction into the Army during July and August due to increased manpower requirements announced this week by the Department of Defense, it was announced by Colonel Arthur A. Holmes, state director of Selective Service.

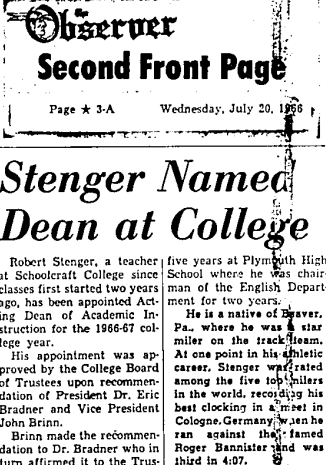

The previous July call for 2,225 men has been increased by 300 for a total call of 2,525.

The August call for 2,380 men will be increased by 450 for a total of 2,830. It is expected that the September call will require an additional 2,000 to 2,000 registrants to be delivered by Michigan local boards.

With approximately 9,000 men to be ordered for induction over the next three months, Michigan local boards will virtually exhaust the currently available pool of Class A-1 manpower. Local boards have been authorized to select married registrants in Class I-A who do not have children to fill all outstanding calls.

With insufficient registrants available for induction at age 19, all local boards have been requested to tighten deferment requirements and screen additional manpower from among registrants previously deferred as students or for occupational and dependency reasons.

Michigan local boards have reported approximately 40,000 inductions and enlistments during the past 12 months.

Dairyman Picked By Draft Board

A combat veteran of World War II appears to be the person who will fill the fifth seat on Draft Board 102 of Plymouth.

Referred to government officials is the name of Vern Bodker, 41, member of the family-owned Bodker Dairy Co., 25380 Five Mile Road, Redford Township.

He was picked July 13 by the other four members of the board, headed by John L. Moberley, justice of the peace and attorney.

Final appointment is made by the President.

Bodker, father of two boys, 17 and 10, has resided in the township for 37 years.

He was an Army sergeant involved in anti-aircraft operations in the years 1943 through '45.

The potential new member said some friends had urged him to accept the vacancy and he is willing to do so because he has some free time.

"The present board strikes me as a hard-working board," he said.

Areas served by the Plymouth Selective Service Board include Plymouth, Livonia, Northville and the townships of Canton and Redford.

Mrs. L. M. Fedell said a supplemental call had been issued and 31 more draftees will be ordered to report for induction July 27. Ten men answered the summons earlier this month.

Fifty men are to report August 8, but Mrs. Fedell said she expects there will also be another supplemental call.

No men married earlier than August-28, 1965, have yet been summoned by this board, she noted.
