Card of Thanks

We wish to thank our neighbors and friends for their kindness to us in our time of affliction, and for their beautiful floral offerings, for the music so willingly given and also to our friend Mr. Gullen, who so kindly responded when we called.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Shear.

IMPRESSIVE TRUTH.

At the booksellers' recent annual convention in New York, Irvin S. Cobb pointed out the great help to book-selling that advertising affords. "A book," he said, "gets a good review—the author, perhaps, is called a genius. That review of itself sells perhaps, 100 copies. But the review, quoted in a good, big advertisement, might easily sell 20,000 copies."

Mr. Cobb paused, then added impressively: "The temple of commerce, gentlemen, is supported by columns of advertising."

TOO FORWARD.

"By Jove, I had a narrow escape yesterday!"

"Really? How?"

"Well, four of us were lunching together, and, of course, you know how one has to on that sort of occasion—we each insisted on stumping up and paying the bill."

"Yes," remarked his friend. "But what about that narrow escape?"

"That's just it. For a minute or two it looked very much as though I'd overplayed the game and the other three really were going to leave me with that bill to pay."

COULDN'T FOOL HIM.

HEW ON THE WINGS OF LOVE

No Obstacles Could Daunt Modern Youth on Mission to the Lady of His Heart.

"Take your hat!" cried his anxious mother.

"Haven't time!" he shouted over his shoulder, and, munching his dessert as he ran, he raced down the front steps and up toward Smooch-hocken street.

At Smooch-hocken street a large snail had rolled in between the car tracks and was holding traffic up something fearfully. A line of drays, bays, shays and sleighs stretched for blocks.

"Just my luck," he panted, and without pausing kept on, running five blocks out of his way to get around the obstructing vehicles and so to Ginkholliher street. Here more disappointment waited. The Green Men of Little Rock, Ark., were parading and Ginkholliher street was roped off. "Blast it!" he groaned through his throbbing nose. "I'll never get there!"

And so, what with one thing and another, it was an hour and a quarter from the time he left his house when he finally pulled frantically at Mirabel's doorbell.

"Mirabel!" he gasped. "I'm here! I'm almost all in, but I'm here! I've got a new tangent to show you!"

And, amid the fantastic shadows of the dark family parlor, they joyously danced.

The Star—I must have real food in the banquet scene tonight.

Hard-Pressed Manager—Why?

The Star—Because I'm hungry.

HAD NO USE FOR BLANKETS.

On a certain California ranch, in the "rush" season the men were kept busy practically day and night, working in the field till dark, and after that being obliged to look after their teams.

One day the employer was about to drive off in his auto for a trip to the city, when one of the "hands," a recent arrival, threw in a bundle beside him.

"What's this?" demanded the boss. "Going to quit in the middle of the season? You've got a check, too, to think I'll take your bundle!"

"Quit nuthin'!" returned the other. "I want you to take them blankets in town and trade 'em for a lantern. I don't need no blankets on this job!"

APPLIED ADVICE.

"I want to buy one of those 'Do It Now' cards."

"Sorry," said the clerk, "but we're out of those cards. We'll have some printed next week."

"You told me that last week."

At this point the proprietor came forward.

"Print some immediately," he ordered, "and tack up about forty of 'em around here."

NOT MUCH.

"Has that energetic wife of yours anything on her hands just now?"

"Strange to say, nothing but her gloves."

NEW DANGER.

"People are certainly getting bitten by eugenics lately."

"Is that a kind of dog that goes mad easy?"

HIS IDEA.

"What did Hamlet mean by talking of a glass fashion?"

"I guess he meant a glass of the grape juice of that time."

PRACTICAL CONCLUSION.

"What is the usual outcome of romance?"

"That depends very much upon the income of the parties."

RECOGNIZED WORK OF SATAN

Negro Preacher Held Author of All Evil Responsible for Absence of Sermon at Meeting.

The negroes of the south are an emotional people, and this characteristic is most plainly seen in their religious meetings, according to the New York Times. In such a state of excitement do they often work at this time that it has a hypnotic effect on the nerves, and many fall into a trance. On awakening they tell wonderful things about trips to the other world and of the sights they saw in spirit land.

As many fall unconscious on the hard floor, it was the custom among the negroes at a place called Gray's Hill meeting to put straw on the floor deep enough to make a soft bedding. But one night the caretaker forgot to spread any. As a consequence the congregation remained unmoved, in spite of the preacher's terrible paintings of the horrors experienced by the unrepentant sinner. He roared and ranted, but none of the sisters or brothers got up any excitement. They rocked backward and forward and tickled the air with "Amenas," but not a single one went into a trance.

Glancing at the hard, bare floor, he at once understood the situation. "Brothers and sisters," he exclaimed, with tears in his voice, "Satan sholy am amongst us tonight. There is forty souls lost here this evening fur want ob straw."

SHE KNEW HIM

Delay—She took up higher mathematics at college.

Maisie—Yes, and even at that I'll bet she can't figure out when Mr. Shyboy is going to propose.

MARITAL WAYS OF BADGERS.

From some interesting anecdotes about the "social side" of animal life related by Mr. Ernest Thompson Seton at the Lyceum club in London, it seems that badgers have their periods of jovial companionship, but it is remarkable that often a widower badger will refuse to have a second wife. Life to him seems to become sour and bitter; female beauty has no attraction for him. He takes himself to bachelor's quarters. "I have known a badger," said the lecturer, "who after his mate died, lived with another male badger for the rest of his life."

ANTARCTIC COAL.

According to Prof. D. W. Edgeworth David of the University of Sydney, Australia, the deposits of coal discovered by the Shackleton and Scott expeditions in the Antarctic will perhaps prove to be one of the largest unworked coal fields in the world. Wild of the Shackleton expedition discovered seven seams of coal outcropping in a great cliff of sandstone and shale. The thickness of these seams, inclusive of a few thin bands, was seven feet. Specimens chipped out by Wild with his hammer have been analyzed at Sydney and show the coal to be of workable quality. Scott's geologists traced this coal for a distance of 690 miles, extending northward from the head of Beardmore glacier.

ACCOUNTING FOR THINGS.

Bacon—It is said that systematic exercises, according to tests in a German university, can be made to increase a person's lung capacity 12 per cent.

Egbert—Well, you know those English suffragettes exercise a good deal.

IN DISGRACE.

"Let us give that man into custody! He is wearing false whiskers."

"Do slow."

"But he must be up to something nefarious."

"Maybe he's only protecting himself. He may be an amiable old dog."
