This week at the beautiful Wash ington theatre, Detroit, Miss Vir-ginia Harned entered upon a two week's engagement with the permanent organization, the William Morris players, appearing for her first week in Sir Arthur W. Pipero's hrst week in Sir Arthur W. Pilero's wonderful drama, 'Iris.' Instantaneously Miss Harued scored a veritable triumph in the title role and throughout the play was accorded spontaneous and con tiuned applause.

Certainly the management of the Washington Theatre is keeping faith with the public and no prom previously made has Each presentation so unfulfilled. far has been beautifully put on, no pains or expense having been spared, and as for the company it has been many a day since so per fect an organization has been seen in Detroit, or elsewhere for that matter.

For the second week engagement, Miss Harned will be seen in an entirely different role, that of "Betsey" in the clever comedy, "An American Widow," by Kellett Chambers.

Imagine a young widow just emerging from her "year of mourn-ing," making up her mind upon and live in the gayety of court circles through a royal alliance, confronted by a second Lee from the Garland lodge of will prohibiting her marrying any Detroit were admitted to member-but an American born cilizen unde penalty of forfeiting her inherit-ance. DID NOT LOOK LIKE WORK

A young lady, lately and happily married, has a literary man for a husband, who does all his work at home.

It was very good work, and pays very well, end, as they sae newly married, they are delighted with the opportunities for being simuse constantly together.

Recently they got a new servant, a buron German girl, who proved herself handy, and also seemed to take a deep interest in the young couple. Of course, she saw the husband in the homes a good deal; her mistress was not urepeased for band in the house a good deal; but her mistress was not prepared for the following:
