School Committee Represents City

A cross-section of the Garden City community was evident in the 28 members of the Lay Committee to Study Building Needs and Finance, which submitted its recommendation of a $1,534,000 building program to the school board last week.

Meeting weekly since late October, the group includes citizens from school organizations, service and civic clubs and professional associations.

Livonia Bank Will Expand Its Services

Livonia National Bank has established a new department, consistent with its policy of improving and expanding its business services.

President Elvin D. Dougherty has announced that Duane L. Mellinger, vice president, would head up the accounts receivable financing department and assume the responsibility for its coordination and expansion.

The new department will make advances to businesses against their accounts receivable. Dougherty stated, "This type of loan will give the business man a more liquid working capital position, and allow him to take advantage of his supplier's cash discounts."

Dougherty estimated that with the addition of the accounts receivable financing department and the expansion of other business services, Livonia National Bank would increase its total assets by 40 per cent this year.

Also announced was the decision by the Board of Directors to pay a quarterly dividend of twenty-five cents on March 15 to stockholders of record March 1, 1967.

No License, Driver Jailed For 15 Days

Jail doors have closed for 15 days behind a 33-year-old Brighton driver who continued to drive, despite several arrests for driving on a revoked license.

After failing to appear in Livonia Municipal Court to face trial, a warrant was issued for the arrest of Richard H. Kinnell of 4276 Highest Dr. He was picked up by Michigan State Troopers.

Kinnell pleaded guilty to driving on a revoked license and to varying his course without safe observation on Oct. 25, 1966. He paid a fine of $25 for the second offense, set by Judge James McCann.

Livonia Teachers Not Required To Attend Evening PTA Meetings

Examination of teacher responsibilities, a factor in school and in the evening, has been promised by Livonia School Supt. Benton E. Yates and Livonia Education Association President Roger Stephon. Their concern apparently stems from a challenge, issued by Roy Ernst, Franklin High School music teacher, asking for clarification of contract terms relating to extra-curricular duties.

A joint statement, issued Jan. 19 by Yates and Stephon reads: "... Attendance at such evening activities as PTA meetings, the chaperoning of student activities, student activities and other programs is voluntary and not required."

Ernst, well-known in this area for his musical productions, writing in "The Livonia Teacher" of January 1967, said he had asked for interpretation of the contract with the teachers early in the fall but none was forthcoming.

"I have made a personal grievance which verifies the position that teachers cannot be required to attend evening activities," he says.

"This is an area of vital concern to teachers because it is a complete revision of the previous policy and gives the teachers the sole right to determine how much of his evening time will be allocated to school activities."

Yates and Stephon expressed the need for teacher cooperation in attending additional activities:

"In this and other sections, however, it is also recognized that the success or failure of such student programs is to a large extent dependent upon the willingness of teachers to acknowledge requests recognizing the importance of such activities and programs."

the overall educational development of students.

"Neither the Board nor the Association wishes to see the existing program of student activities severely curtailed or jeopardized during the current school year or in subsequent years."

"It was the intent of the agreement for both parties to recognize the practices of many years and to equalize such voluntary teacher assignments."

"The Superintendent, for the Board, and the officers of the Association clearly recognize the need to continue to examine at the next date for negotiations the entire area of teacher responsibilities for after-school and evening activities, both in terms of contractual language and in terms of the relationships such responsibilities may have to other compensated teacher tasks."
